JAPANESE BOMBARDMENT OF NANLING MAY PRELUDE ATTACK

REICHSMARK THREATENED WITH CRASH

Financial Expert
Warns Germany.

IMPORT QUOTA DANGER.

Berlin, Yesterday.
Exciting rumours are afloat, following the unexpected Cabinet meeting to consider the storm of protests over the projected rationing of agricultural imports.
The Cabinet dealt, among other things, with a letter from President Luther of the Reichsbank, who, according to newspaper reports, warned the Government of the impossibility of maintaining the stability of currency unless the quota project were abandoned.

HANS LUTHER

Anxiety was only partly allayed by the official denial that the letter implied a dangerous situation for the mark but it is anticipated that the Government will be compelled at least to postpone the projected rigid control of imports of farm stuffs.

The quota system was the price paid by Chancellor von Papen's Government for support of the Agriculturalists in the Reichstag. It aroused bitter opposition from industrialists and threats of reprisals from neighbouring countries, however.

On top of the already critical political situation, this new development leaves the Government more harassed than ever. Every day some fresh distraction arises. This week it has been threats of a Royalist coup, smashing of Holland-German trade alliances and now the serious threat of another economic mishap; with the collapse of the badly battered German mark a shadow, but still alarming, possibility.

Chancellor von Papen and his colleagues in the Government are faced, too, with the necessity of preparing for a national election scarcely two weeks away. — Reuter.

LYTTON AND COLLEAGUES SUMMONED

Geneva, Yesterday.

Members of the Lytton Commission have been invited by the Council of the League of Nations to attend its deliberations on their report. This move is believed to be in accordance with the Commission's wishes. "It will enable them to expand upon points that may be raised."

The most important aspect of this position is that it definitely associates the United States with the handling of the Lytton Report, because General McCoy, the American member of the Commission must attend the Council sessions with his colleagues. — Reuter.

MASSING OF TROOPS IN JEHOI REGION

WAR RUMOURS FLY

VOLUNTEERS' VICTORIES

NANKING, YESTERDAY.

JAPANESE ARTILLERY UNITS YESTERDAY MORNING COMMENCED A BOMBARDMENT OF NANLING, ACCORDING TO INFORMATION OBTAINED THROUGH CHINESE SOURCES IN TIENSIN. IN CONSEQUENCE OF THIS ACTIVITY, TENSION HAS GREATLY INCREASED THROUGHOUT THE PROVINCE OF JEHOI.

The same report asserts that opinion throughout North China is divided as to whether this bombardment is merely in the nature of a demonstration or a prelude to major operations.

DE LA SALA BONDED TO KEEP PEACE

Pleads Guilty To Reduced Charge.

"HOT-TEMPERED" MAN.

Pleading guilty through Mr. Leo d'Almada, Sr., to a charge of common assault, reduced from one of criminal intimidation against Mr. Raymond O'Shea, editor of "The Critic," Pastor Manuel de la Sala was convicted by Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Magistracy yesterday, and bound over in a personal surety for $250 to be of good behaviour for one year.

His Worship administered a warning to the accused, saying: "You are a very hot-tempered young man. It may be due to past experiences or to your temperament. . . . You are liable to get into very very serious trouble. I want you to understand that. You are a young man now and there is no reason why you should not pull yourself together."

Mr. Robert de la Sala, brother of the accused, who was present in Court, said he was prepared to sign the surety bond.
At the commencement of the hearing His Worship said he had come to the conclusion in Mr. O'Shea's case, as he had done in Major Cassel's, that he should reduce the charge.

Deny Accusation.

Mr. d'Almada, addressing the Bench, said he had been instructed to plead guilty technically to an assault on the person of Mr. O'Shea. The story as related by Mr. O'Shea, the defence denied, however. The real facts were that after leaving the St. Francis Hotel, de la Sala got into a riksha, and when passing the Netherlands Bank he happened

Mr. Lee Yuen-wo, Magistrate of Tol Shan, is a visitor here, and is studying the Colony system of education.

Another report states that the Japanese have mobilised six brigades of troops for a vigorous drive against the Chinese Volunteer units along the eastern frontier of Jehoi, where the anti-Manchukuo forces have proved a thorn-in-the-flesh to authorities. Clashes continue to occur daily at numerous points. — Reuter.

Old Battlefield.

According to advices received through the Kuo Min News Agency from Peiping, the Nonni River bridge, scene of fierce fighting during the early engagements between Japanese and Chinese last year, has been recaptured by Heilungkiang National Salvation Army troops. The Japanese were defeated in an engagement on the west bank of the river some days ago, October 9, the report states.

Information continues to come through the same sources of fighting between Volunteers and Manchukuo soldiers. The Volunteers have occupied Chentung, on the Taonan-Anganchi Railway south of T'aiichien. The Chinese are still pressing Mukden, according to another despatch, and there has been severe fighting in the suburbs. The Volunteers retired, however, after some hours of conflict with Japanese defenders.

NAVAL OFFICER LOSES APPEAL FROM SENTENCE

Six Month Term For

ONE JUDGE DISSENTS.

Limassol, Yesterday.

Commander Sutton, of H.M.S. Resource, sentenced to six months' imprisonment on a charge of manslaughter, outcome of the death of a Cyprus merchant, lost his appeal.

Mr. Justice Mustapha, F.M.S., one of three judges sitting in the court of appeal, dissenting, their lordships upheld the sentence.

Chief Justice Sir Herbert Strange, P.M.S., Judge Seretides held for dismissal of the appeal. The merchant died as a result of a blow struck by the Commander during a dispute on his business premises on September 18. — Reuter.

GERMANY OPPOSES GENEVA

Wants Arms Parley
Held In London.

NO CAPITULATION.

(Reuter's Special Service).

London, Yesterday.

The decision of Premier MacDonald and Herriot, for Great Britain and France respectively that Geneva should be the venue for the Four-Power Conference upon the German claim for armaments equality has been accepted by Italy. But from Berlin comes the blunt message that Germany will refuse to go to Geneva because the German Government feels such a Conference there will really amount to German participation in the Disarmament Conference before her equality claim has been admitted.

The German Government's attitude towards the Four-Power Conference at Geneva is that unless her claim to equality is admitted in principle, her presence at Geneva is tantamount to capitulation, Berlin despatches add. The Government is quite prepared to confer in London or elsewhere, but not at Geneva. It hopes France will agree to a change of venue, as Germany ardently desires the question of her equality claim to be settled so the nation can resume her participation in the Disarmament Conference.

NOTORIOUS RED CHIEF HELD BY BELFAST POLICE

Tom Mann Ordered
Back To Ship.

SEQUEL OF RIOTING.

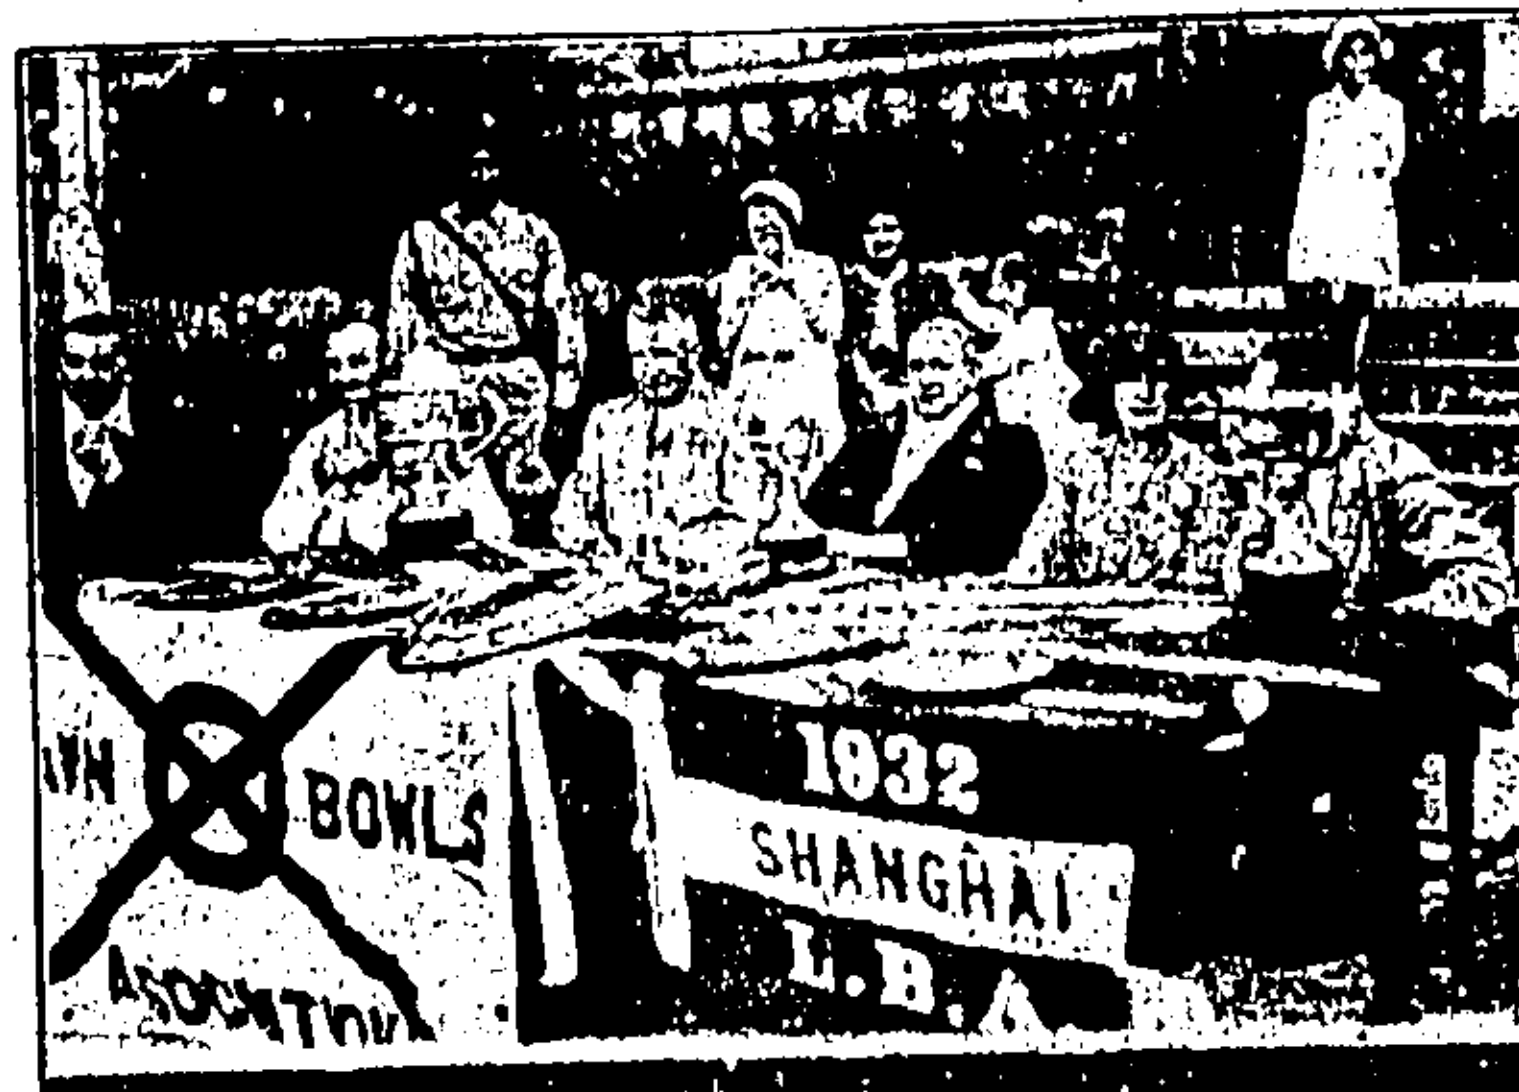

Belfast, Yesterday.

The well-known Communist, Tom Mann, was arrested in Belfast to-day and has been ordered deported to Liverpool.

He arrived this morning, intending to address a demonstration, but was detained at the Police Station, escorted back to his ship and ordered to remain in his cabin until the boat sailed. The arrest was made after the funeral of a man who was killed in the recent Belfast disturbances. Mann should have been one of the pall-bearers.

It is not yet known whether any charge will be preferred against Mann.

The Belfast police have power to arrest anyone they think likely to cause a disturbance and the arrest of Mann may have been a precautionary measure only. — Reuter.

PRIZE - GIVING ADDRESSES AT GIRLS' SCHOOL

Successful Students
In Year's List.

DR. KOTEWALL'S PRAISE.

The delayed prize distribution of the Diocesan Girls' School, Kowloon, was held yesterday afternoon. The Hon. Dr. R. H. Kotewall, C.M.G., LL.D., who has just recovered from a slight indisposition, distributing the scholarships and prizes.

The school hall was filled to capacity with parents, pupils, and old girls of the D.G.S., while supporting the Headmistress, Miss H. D. Sawyer, on the stage were the Director of Education, Mr. G. P. de Martin, M.B.E., the Rev. W. Walton Rogers, Vicar of St. Andrew's Church, Professor L. Forster, the Hon. Dr. and Mrs. Kotewall, Mr. S. M. Churn, and others.

The proceedings began with the singing of the school hymn, after which the Headmistress addressed the gathering. An interesting programme of entertainment was provided by the different classes, each item being well received. Mr. Rupert Baldwin, A.T.C.L., was at the piano.

Reading the annual report for 1931, the Headmistress said: "Report of Work."

"Our prize-giving is generally held in February or March, but this year, chiefly owing to change of staff, we were unable to prepare an entertainment in either of those months."

Prince Of Wales' Golf Spoiled But Rain Cannot Stop Shopping

(Reuter's Special Service).

The Hague, Yesterday.
Despite the pouring rain which prevented his golfing this morning the Prince of Wales contrived to spend his time, enjoyably, visiting sights of the city and shopping.

The Royal party was the centre of great interest. The Hague's citizens crowded to see the Prince.

Owing to the fact that Queen Wilhelmina is at present staying at the Summer Palace at Helleo, the Prince of Wales was unable to see her. But he sent a message expressing the hope of an early opportunity to revisit Holland and pay his respects to its most gracious Queen. Queen Wilhelmina replied, sincerely regretting having missed this pleasure of seeing the Prince on this occasion but adding she would be delighted to receive a visit from him when he returns to Holland.

MR. WANG CHANG-WEI PLANS TO HOLIDAY IN COLONY.

Former Executive Yuan Chief Seeks To Regain Health.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Shanghai, Yesterday.
Mr. Wang Ching-wei, the man who, so it is said, has consistently fought the powerful military factions in China's Government for years, is going to Hong Kong to attempt to regain his failing health.

For some time, it is understood, Mr. Wang has been unwell. He recently spoke of going to Europe to recuperate, but it is now thought likely that he will not go so far from the scene of his duties at a time of such crisis.

MR. HOOVER'S FEAR FOR GOLD EXAGGERATED

Brings Paris Action To
"Slump" Dollar.

CONFIDENCE EXPRESSED.

Washington, Oct. 12.

President Herbert Hoover's recent campaign speech in Des Moines, where he told how the country was within a fortnight of abandoning the gold standard at the worst period of the depression last Spring, created a reaction here to-day as Treasury and Federal Reserve officials watched evident efforts in Paris to undermine the dollar, while Senator Carter Glass, Virginia Democrat, admittedly the Senate's foremost banking authority, expressed doubt that the situation was nearly as bad as the President described.

Senator Glass sharply protested over the president's "astounding statements" regarding the menace to the gold standard, declaring that "nothing done or suggested by the administration indicated any such disaster was pending."

Concern Not Expressed.
The Senate's banking expert continued, asserting that certain "utterly unsound and desperate devices" were proposed by the administration which would have driven the country off the gold standard if enacted by congress, because they would have devalued currency, and permitted banks' unliquidated and ineligible assets to be dumped into the lap of the Federal Reserve system.

BRITISH CAPTIVES ARE SAFE

Mrs. Pawley & Corkran
Nearer Freedom.

MURDER SUSPECTS HELD.

Round-Up Follows Brutal
Playing In Harbin.

Yingkow, Yesterday.

The safety of Mrs. Muriel Pawley and Mr. Charles Corkran, captives of Chinese bandits in some remote camp, has been definitely assured as a result of parleys between the bandits who hold them for ransom and the Japanese military authorities. The Japanese are now negotiating for the release of the two, for more than a month in fear of their lives and living under impossible conditions.

The British vice-Consul, Mr. Clarke, and Captain Staples, also of the diplomatic service, have been co-operating with the Japanese authorities and have only just returned from Panchum, from which point they sought to make connections with the bandit chief. They have been accompanied on their journey by Capt. Kawahito of the Japanese Imperial Army. — Reuter.

Newchwang, Yesterday.
Representatives of the Japanese Army have had parleys with the captives of Mrs. Muriel Pawley and Mr. Charles Corkran and have been definitely assured of the safety of the two Britishers. Negotiations for their release are now taking shape.

Suspects in Custody.
Tokyo, Yesterday.
Reports from Harbin state that 25 suspects have been arrested in connection with the murder of Mrs. Woodruff, brutally shot here while driving with her two children to their school.

A grueling examination of the men arrested revealed the two who are apparently responsible for the shooting. One of these is the man Chang Nan-ye, an ex-soldier and alleged leader of a notorious gang of kidnappers. Police declare they have found that the same gang was responsible for the attack upon the two British bankers on the Harbin Golf Course on September 10. It is believed that this gang has political backing, as the recent outrages appear to have been carried out systematically and with the purpose of embarrassing the authorities with the foreign powers.

More Protection.

Peiping, Yesterday.
From Harbin it is learned that the Consul Corps has held a meeting to discuss the safety of foreign residents. The Chief of Police, who attended, promised to improve the policing of the city. It is learned that troops belonging to General Han Fu-chu occupied Chefoo without incident attending their entry. The senior officer has given assurance that foreign lives and property will be fully protected.

GOVERNMENT SEEKS POWER OVER CHURCH

Madrid, Yesterday.
A bill to regulate the great religious Orders of Spain was submitted to Parliament to-day.

The Government, by this projected legislation, proposes to reserve the right to approve the appointment of high ecclesiastical authorities and provides that all buildings used by the Roman Catholic Church for services should become national property.

So far, the reaction of the church has not been made known. But a storm of protest is anticipated, and even violence is possible. — Reuter.

The result was more successful. Here it so chanced that North and South and indeed East and West were all playing the Direct system.

As before, South dealt, and after a lengthy scrutiny of his cards opened with, "Who's got the King of Clubs?" "I have," replied North, "and three small ones, and a single-ton Heart."

South now proceeded to count North's hand.

"Partner," he said, "I shall bid a grand slam in Clubs on this. I think we ought to pull it off. I know you don't mind if we go down, but it's a chance in a lifetime, seven Clubs."

It was now West's turn. "What about a sacrificial bid of Seven Spades, partner? I've a hundred honours to set against."

"Don't be silly," exclaimed East. "I haven't a rag; you'll be down a packet!"

"Well, I may as well double anyway. I've two honour tricks."

"Not on your life," retorted East. "They've got together well on this hand and it's probably a freak."

"All right. No bid. I'm satisfied," said North; and East said, "Take a lead, partner, and be careful about it."

West led the King of Spades, which South took with the Ace and laid down the hand.

"Half a minute," objected West. "What about that two of Spades?"

"I shall ruff it in dummy after drawing all your trumps and discarding the two Spades on my set Heart suit," said South. "Splendid," said North, as he totted up 1,500 + 700 for rubber + 140 below the line: "a very nice rubber."

And, after such an example, who shall still contend that natural bidding can hold its own against system bidding in general, and the Direct system in particular!!!

Double Dummy Problem.

North.

Spades: 3

Diamonds: 3, 2

Clubs: 4

West.

Hearts: 5, 4

Clubs: 3, 2

South.

Spades: 7, 6, 2

Diamonds: 4

East.

Hearts: 3, 2

Spades are trumps. West leads the five of Hearts, South to make all tricks against best defence. The answer, of course, is that South must ruff in North with the three of Spades, and play the two from his own hand. North now leads the four of Clubs, and whether East ruffs or discards his Heart, South must make the rest.

BRIDGE NOTES

Natural - v - System Bidding.

At the present moment, when several writers on Bridge are decrying the use of and need for systems in Contract bidding, and when some of these maintain that as good and better results can be obtained by natural or common-sense bidding (whatever these terms may mean), it is interesting to pick out a particular hand played at Duplicate and compare results attained by the two different methods. Such a hand I give below:

North.

Spades: 5, 4, 3

Hearts: 8

Diamonds: K, Q, J, 5, 4

Clubs: K, 10, 9, 4

West.

Spades: K, Q, J, 10, 9, 8

Hearts: 3, 2

Diamonds: A, 10, 3, 2

Clubs: 5

South.

Spades: A, 2

Hearts: A, K, Q, J, 10, 9

Diamonds:

Clubs: A, Q, J, 3, 2

East.

Spades: 7, 6

Hearts: 7, 6, 5, 4

Diamonds: 9, 8, 7, 6

Clubs: 8, 7, 6

Both sides vulnerable, love score. South dealt and North-South were "natural" bidders and bid as follows (East-West remaining silent throughout):

South.

Hearts: 5

Hearts: 7

North.

West led the King of Spades, which South had to take with the Ace. Now there are a number of ways of playing this hand, but in this instance South elected to try for the squeeze by leading out six Heart tricks and five Clubs, only to find that West kept the Diamond Ace and East the Spade Seven, and the contract was defeated by one trick. After the hand North maintained that South ought to have made it, so South invited him to play the hands. North thereupon drew trumps; won in dummy with a Club, and proceeded to ruff out the Diamonds. He soon found, however, that he had not nearly enough entries in dummy to effect this, and finally agreed the grand slam could not be made. Then the bidding was criticised. South maintained the hand was unlucky, and that if North had held the Ace of Diamonds the grand slam was a certainty.

A Gamble on Bidding.

"But," objected North, "I might have had Ace, King of Diamonds, but not the King of Clubs, and then the contract would have depended on a successful finesse against the King." West pointed out that in that case South would have had no entry in North to take the finesse, and East-West both agreed that the grand slam was a gamble on the bidding (as undoubtedly it was), and did not deserve to succeed.

In the other room the bidding took an entirely different turn and (Continued at foot of preceding Column).

The Other Side Of Buddhism

"Biased Statement" In Padre's Review

CONTRIBUTOR'S ATTACK

(By K. B. Vaidya.)

THERE appeared in the Sunday Herald of 9-10-32 a very interesting article contributed by a "Local Padre," apparently delineating the salient features and main principles of the Buddhism. Although we may congratulate the "Local Padre" on the most arduous task he has taken upon himself of comparing the four Religions, viz., Buddhism, Confucianism, Mahomedanism and Christianity, that came to establish themselves between 600 B.C. and 600 A.D., his disquisition of the Buddhism is exposed to some unpardonable misstatements of facts, irrelevant issues and biased statements. Since it is earnestly hoped that the "Local Padre" keeps himself unbiased in his criticism of the four great Religions, an attempt is made in this article to present the other side by clearing up the misunderstandings underlying his article and by correcting certain facts. This reminder is necessary, because the "Local Padre's" intentions are to assess the value of each of these four Religions and to show which of the four present the best system of Religion. From our experience of the Padres and Missionaries, we can surmise what Religion the Padre will try to ennoble and elevate above the remaining three, and, therefore, it would not be out of place to advance a fair criticism of the "Local Padre's" exposition, in the initial stages of his noble attempt.

(1) In the first place, the Padre states that Buddha's birth-place and date was not known until an English Archaeologist discovered in 1895 A.D. a pillar erected by Asoka in memory of Buddha, whereby it was proved that Buddha (Siddhartha) was born in 650 B.C. and that his birth-place was "Kapilvastu." This statement is wholly untrue, as the Padre is not well-informed on the subject. "Life of Buddha" written by "Asanagush" in the original Pali script verses and transcribed in Sanskrit somewhere about 800 A.D. clearly stated "Kapilvastu" as Buddha's birth place, and the date of his birth has been fixed somewhere about 600 B.C. long before 1895 A.D. Historical Works dealing with Ancient Indian history and other documents published long before 1895 A.D. mention of the date and place of the birth of Buddha. The "Local Padre," therefore, may take it as a definite statement that the birth-place and date of Buddha's birth was definitely allocated long before 1895 A.D.

ern India are bounded by the Himalayas and therefore, if Kapilvastu is beyond the borders of Northern India, it follows, according to the Padre's statement, that this place must be in the Himalayas itself or in the Tibet or in the Central Asia, or in the Plateau of Pamir. Nothing of the kind. "Kapilvastu" is definitely allocated somewhere near Patna (Pataliputra) in the Province of Bihar.

Son of a King.

(3) The "Local Padre" states that "the Buddha was born of wealthy parents." Yes, he was born of wealthy Parents, but these Parents were, further, a ruling King and Queen. The "Local Padre" apparently is not aware of Buddha's Royal birth and he does not know that Buddha was a Prince when born and would have become a King himself. The Padre says that it was owing to Buddha's skill in archery that he married a Princess, Yashodhara. This is pure invention and probably an invention of the Padre. It was hardly possible for any wealthy man or even for those skilled in archery to marry a Princess, unless he was of Royal Blood.

(4) The "Local Padre" says that "there is not much reference to 'God' in Buddha's teaching. This is true. But, in making this statement the 'Local Padre's' motive is not clear. Reading between the lines, we may infer that the Local Padre means to discredit Buddha's teaching because it has not much reference to God. And, because Buddha's teaching has not much reference to God, the same need not be taken seriously and does not deserve to be raised to the rank of Religion, as it is a mere system of "Clean Philosophy." For a student of Theology, who is out to institute comparisons of various Religions, this attitude, to say the least, is ill-advised.

The "Local Padre" should understand that Buddha was a Hindu when born and his main object was to preach a Puritan Hinduism. He did not trouble himself to preach about God, because Hindu Religion had done enough to preach about God, and no further reference to God was necessary. What he wanted was a cleaner system of life by which one could attain "Nirvana"—The Final Absolution—which the Buddha considered enough for his purpose. His Religion, that is the Hindu Religion, had preached enough of God and he took this for granted and expounded his Philosophy. Every Religion, in its onward march, gathers some dogmas, rituals and the like, which

Old Clothes Markets

Budapest.
THE Budapest old clothes market has lately shown renewed activity. The "Magyarasag" has interviewed Mr. Lipos Tichin, Europe's "old clothes king," who has come to Budapest to solve the present difficulties of the exchange, and gives some interesting details of the fate of Europe's cast-off garments.

Mr. Tichin, who is of Greek origin, has his centre in London, where he ships old clothes to distributing stations in Tunis, Algiers, Morocco, Madagascar, etc., during the rainy season of June to October. From these stations Mr. Tichin's agents travel round the Negro, Bushman, Berber and Senegalese villages, and sell the clothes for furs, ivory, gold, uncut diamonds, and crocodile skins. The most favoured style of dress in Africa is the formal English afternoon or evening suit, and no objection seems to be made if the elbows are out, the back split, and the trousers only half the required length. In a temperature of over a hundred degrees the Senegalese parade about in black cloth which rarely meets at the required places; and should a husband find European dress un-comfortably oppressive, his wife is only too delighted to have the opportunity of assuming it.

Women Outnumber Male Voters

WITH an eye to future elections, the Right elements find much to satisfy them in the provisional returns of the elec-tional census which was recently completed throughout Spain. The figures show that of approximately 13,000,000 voters, 6,671-000 are women as compared with 6,193,000 men. In only six of the forty-seven Provinces do the men exceed the women, namely in Albacete, Cuenca, Jaen, Guipuzcoa, Tarragona, Segovia.

In view of the influence of the Church with Spanish women, the Right hopes that it will be able to count on solid feminine support; but even in these circles a certain amount of dismay is felt at the absolute lack of preparation of women for intervention in politics.

Preventable Childbirth Fatalities Half Of Deaths Are Unnecessary Supervision Essential

THE final report of the Departmental Committee on Matternal, Mortality and Morbidity has now been issued, and it will be studied with care and interest by all those who are concerned at the "lag" in this branch of medical science when compared with the advances and improvements in other directions.

The first obvious point that emerges from the report is that probably half the deaths in childbirth in this country are preventable. A skilful analysis of nearly six thousand reports on maternal deaths brings out clearly that a "primary avoidable factor" was present in nearly 50 per cent. This factor was in some instances lack or failure of ante-natal care, in others it was traced to an error of judgment on the part of the attendant or to lack of suitable facilities or to negligence of the patient.

The education of public opinion, especially as regards the need for supervision during pregnancy, is deemed necessary with care that no bogey of possible dangers is set up to frighten mothers while the possibility of voluntary notification of pregnancy is discussed. If half the maternal deaths can be prevented then it should not be beyond the power of modern health and medical authorities to see that prevention is effective.
The disquieting feature of the report, however, appears to be in the remaining fifty per cent. of deaths not coming under this heading. For example, out of a total of 4,655 reports analysed where death was directly due to child bearing, there were 1,856

"cases in which no departure from established practice having a causal relationship to the death has been found."

Isle of White High.
Investigation of the high maternal mortality in certain districts of England and Wales has failed to clear up this aspect of the matter. Why, for example, has the Isle of White such a high rate compared with London?
"Generally speaking," states the report, "there is no evidence that bad housing alone has an appreciable effect in raising maternal mortality, or mortality in the uncomplicated case"; and, again,
"malnutrition, and the indirect effects of poverty do not in themselves explain the high maternal death rate" in certain areas where the rate is particularly high.

It is suggested that general physique may have something to do with this aspect of the question, but it is obvious that more research is necessary. Recent work on puerperal sepsis (blood poisoning after confinement) has shown that in many cases the bacteria causing this are brought to the patient in the throats of the attendants, and the report urges the use of masks as a routine measure, as in all surgical operations.

This may well, help to solve this part of the problem, but it is a disquieting feature of the report that nearly half the deaths from puerperal sepsis occurred in cases which were otherwise completely normal. It is surely these deaths in normal, uncomplicated cases that require urgent research. Meanwhile, by all means let us have preventive measures to deal with the preventable factors.

COOKERY NOTES

FISH salad is very good if made out of cooked vegetables. Cook some small potatoes, a carrot or two, a handful of green beans and one or two beet, cut them into neat slices or cubes and marinate them in a French dressing or mix with a good mayonnaise. Make a shallow bed of the salad, and place the flaked cold fish in the depression on the top or serve in individual salad plates. Dispense with even lettuce leaves as a base or parsley as a decoration unless you are sure it was not grown in the manner peculiar to the country.

Fancied Ham With Baked Beans.
Take slices of boiled ham about one eighth of an inch thick.
Have ready some baked beans and place a tablespoon of them on each slice. Roll up the ham neatly and secure with a tooth-pick. Place in a casserole dish.
Fill more beans on top of the rolls, and bake in the oven till the ham is heated through. Serve with either tomato sauce made from fresh tomatoes or a good mustard sauce.

A Supper Dish.
A supper dish which can be prepared quickly in an emergency is one composed of sardines served in a new way. One tin of sardines packed in oil will be required to make the dish. After opening the tin drain the oil into a small frying-pan and heat it to boiling-point. Chop up two small onions as finely as possible and fry in the oil until golden brown.
Then place the sardines on top of the onions and fry again for a short time. Serve the sardines and onions on fairly thick buttered toast with tomato sauce.

Filleted Fish A La Maitre D'Hotel.
Skin and fillet the fish and bake in the oven on a greased tin, sprinkling with lemon juice, salt and pepper. Make a sauce of an ounce of flour, an ounce of butter and half a pint of milk.
Add some chopped parsley, a dessertspoon of lemon-juice, salt and pepper. Place the fillets on a hot dish, coat them with the sauce and garnish with cut lemon and parsley.

Braised Duck.
Truss a duck and bake it, taking care to dredge with flour.
Make a good brown sauce, and add to it the juice of one orange and one lemon, boil up and strain, serving separately. The duck should also be wiped over with a cut orange before dredging with flour as this adds to the flavour.

French Beans With Bacon.
When the beans are cooked, drain them, return to the sauce pan and mingle with them tiny cubes of bacon which have been previously crisped, adding pepper, hardly any salt and a little butter.

CREAM OF COLONY BOWLERS GATHER AT BOWLING GREEN.

KOWLOON BOWLS TRIUMPH WIN AITKENHEAD SHIELD FOR FOURTH TIME

CONCLUSION OF 1932 SEASON

96 BOWLERS TAKE PART IN ANNUAL ENCOUNTER.

YESTERDAY afternoon, a red letter day in the history of the Hong Kong Lawn Bowls Association, witnessed the ringing down of the curtain on the 1932 season, when the Aitkenhead Shield was competed for between Kowloon and Hong Kong on the Kowloon Bowling Club green. Kowloon won by 39 shots, making this their fourth victory since 1928. Hong Kong won last year.

No less than 96 local lawn bowlers took part in the game, including His Excellency the Officer Administering the Government (the Hon. Mr. W. T. Southern, C.M.G.) who skipped Hong Kong's No. 3 rink, against a rink skipped by Mr. W. S. Drake, of the K.B.G.C.

Brilliant sunshine favoured the occasion and the greens were in excellent condition, as His Excellency later remarked: "The climate and soil of Kowloon are much better for bowls than across the harbour."

Of the twelve rinks played, Kowloon were victorious in eight, Hong Kong claiming two, while the other two were drawn.

Among the large number of interested visitors was Mrs. Southern, the wife of H. E. O. A. G., who later presented the trophies and plaques to the successful teams and competitors.

Prior to calling on Mrs. Southern to present the trophies, Mr. Brown, in the course of a witty speech, made the welcome announcement that Mr. L. A. Gutierrez, Open Singles champion of the Colony, had given a shield to be competed for annually by different national teams.

Mr. Brown congratulated the Craigieburn Cricket Club on winning both the senior and junior league championships, and for supporting three players for the Inter-port match in Shanghai. He also congratulated the Club de Reccelo on winning the Spey Royal Cup, and the Open Singles Championship for the second time in their history. He paid a tribute to the Police Recreation Club on their success in the latter part of the season, remarking that they had now had their backs against the wall for three or four seasons, but like King's army in 1918 they had stuck to their guns. He also congratulated the Yacht Club on being runners-up in the second division of the bowls league.

He expressed the appreciation of the Association to the Kowloon Bowling Green Club for giving them the ground and for the splendid way in which they had catered for the comfort and convenience of both players and spectators on this auspicious occasion.

MRS. SOUTHERN'S PRESENCE.
Mrs. Brown also thanked Messrs. C. J. Trench, B. E. Maughan and A. L. Shields for their assistance during the past season, and also all the sub-committees who had looked after the details of the games during the year, especially Mr. H. Hampton and Mr. John Ramsay.

In conclusion, the President thanked Mrs. Southern for her kindness in coming to present the trophies, saying that Mrs. Southern had a happy knack of adding pleasure to whatever function she attended.

Mrs. Southern was presented with a lovely basket of flowers on behalf of the L.B.A. by Miss Jean Hale, amid vociferous applause.

Replying on behalf of Mrs. Southern, the Hon. Mr. Southern said that in so doing, he would like to congratulate Mr. Brown on one of the most successful bowls seasons in the history of Hong Kong.

YOUTH REGAINED.
His Excellency congratulated Hong Kong on winning the Inter-port, adding, amid laughter, that since his triumphant return he had been full of spirits and had regained his youth!

As one of the players, he said, he thanked the K. B. G. C. on behalf of the L. B. A. on giving them such an excellent afternoon. He had enjoyed his game immensely that afternoon.

His Excellency said that he had noticed that Kowloon had won the Aitkenhead Shield for the fourth time, but then it was generally known that the Kowloon climate and soil was much better than Hong Kong for lawn bowls.

Concluding, H. E. congratulated the Club de Reccelo on their successful achievements during the year, and on behalf of his wife, the visitors and all the players congratulated the K. B. G. C. on most successful afternoon.

Before the gathering dispersed, Mrs. Southern thanked one and all for the happy afternoon and the flowers.

Three cheers and a hearty "tiger" for Mrs. Southern brought to a close a most enjoyable afternoon, and a most successful season.

New Mamak Shield Record.

Incognitos Win

A sweeping victory by 10 goals to nil, the biggest to be recorded in the Mamak Hockey Tournament thus far this season, was recorded by the 1st H. K. S. Battery R. A., when they romped the Kowloon Indians Tennis Club newcomers to the competition, on the Marina ground yesterday afternoon. The K. L. T. C., who were completely outplayed, met the University on the Marina ground this afternoon.

The Incognitos, who have not yet tasted defeat in the Tournament, went further ahead on the Caroline Hill ground yesterday when they defeated the German Club by 7 goals to 1. The Incogs, scored two goals through C. E. Barros. In the second half Mueller decreased the lead for the Germans, but the Incogs, added further goals through R. C. Reed (3), E. V. Reed (2) and A. P. Sousa.

The Germans' defence worked well in the second half, but they were unable to cope with the cleverer combination of their opponents.

Y. M. C. A. BEAT ARGYLLS IN CLOSE GAME.

Fowler and Wilson Score.

Entertaining the Argyls at King's Park yesterday afternoon, the Y. M. C. A. "A" eleven won by 2 goals to nil, one goal being registered in each half of the game. On the whole the "Y" were the better team and deserved their victory. Fowler, gave a pass from Selk, gave them the lead in the first half, and Wilson, added the second goal from a beautiful pass from Andrews on the left wing.

The Argyls forwards experienced bad luck, Bickie striking the post with a shot that would ordinarily have been a certain goal. Early in the second half Brown scored, but the goal was disallowed on account, offside play.

In a friendly game on the U.S.R.-C. ground, the R.A.S.C. defeated St. Andrew's Club Ladies by 5 goals to 1 in an interesting match. Tupples (2), Marshall (2) and O'Connor netted for the soldiers, while Mr. Woolley was responsible for the Saints' goal.

WEAKENED RADIO TEAM HOLD JATS.

Fast Game Ends In a Draw.

Playing on the Marina ground on Thursday afternoon, the Radio Sports Club drew with the 1st Regiment eleven the score being 1 all. The game was very fast and exciting throughout. The Radio were playing 3 reserves. P. Singh, the right back, Mr. Singh the left half back, and Surjin Singh the goal-keeper were unable to turn out. Kalwant Singh netted for the Radio, while Jaill replied for the Jats. Both goals were scored in the first half.

MIXED DOUBLES TOURNEY IN AID OF M.C.L. FUNDS

CAPTAIN Cannon and Mrs. Lissaman won the Mixed Doubles American Sliding Handicap Tournament which was staged at the L. R. C. yesterday afternoon in aid of the Ministering Children's League.

At the conclusion of the tournament which attracted thirty couples, Mrs. Hancock, wife of the well-known sportsman, Mr. H. R. B. Hancock, distributed the prizes.

From the financial point of view the tournament was a decided success, no less than $150 being added to the M. C. L. funds. A further $20 was raised by the auction of the cakes left over from tea.

The tournament was divided up into three sections—Green, Red and Blue. Capt. Cannon and Mrs. Lissaman were easily the best pair in the Green Division while V. R. Gordon and Miss Thomas just managed to beat Mr. and Mrs. Martin for pride of place in the closely-contested Red section. G. A. White and Miss M. Griffiths won the Blue section from A. E. Taylor and Mrs. Mackie.

Capt. Cannon and Mrs. Lissaman defeated G. A. White and Miss M. Griffiths by 3 games to 2 and followed this up by winning over V. R. Gordon and Miss Thomas by 4 games to 1.

Before presenting the prizes Mrs. Hancock said: "Ladies and Gentlemen, although an exponent of the game of lawn tennis, I have always been very much interested in it, and particularly interested in the L.R.C., and it was therefore a great pleasure and honour to me to be invited to distribute the prizes this afternoon to the lucky winners of this tournament, which has been arranged under the auspices of this club in aid of the M.C.L."

"I think you will agree with me that it has been a great success. Both from the point of view of the players, and the spectators, and especially financially, as I am informed that the sum of $150 will be

In preparation for their forthcoming programme of matches, the Hong Kong Rugby Club fielded two fifteens yesterday afternoon in the first real practice match of the season. After a fast game with the forwards predominant and some excellent passing movements in all departments a final score of 25 points to 8 points was returned.

The outstanding player on the field was J. C. Millar, whose footwork and play both in the loose and tight scrums stamps him as a player of outstanding merit.

A change in the practice days of the Club is announced, and commencing next week practice games and training will take place on Tuesdays and Wednesdays instead of Mondays and Wednesdays as previously arranged.

"Bob" Charles Entries For M. G. Cup.

VALLEY HALL CERTAIN.

Good fields will feature the programme for the Autumn Meeting to be held at Macao today, seven events being on the card, including one unusual race, the Machine Gun Troop Handicap, and the big event of the year, the Macao St. Leger.

Like the Macao Derby, the St. Leger has attracted a classic field, and although there are only eight entries, it should provide an exciting race. Wild Life is likely to start a hot favourite, and on form should win the race. Navy Hall, a stayer who is bursting with fitness, will offer strong opposition, while White Jade Stag, who ran third to Valorous and The Tiger at the last Valley meeting, should offer a safe bet for place money.

WIN FOR VENTUROUS.
In the Machine Gun Troop Handicap over five furlongs, Mr. R. H. Charles has a couple of likely looking entries, and it will not be surprising to see Cupid led in as the winner.

Venturous seems a fairly safe bet in the first race of the day, in spite of his colossal weight of 160 lbs, while Guiding Star who is also carrying plenty of weight should run into easy place money.

Valley Hall should not experience a great deal of trouble in taking

A. M. RUMJAHN MADE A GALLANT BUT UNAVAILING EFFORT TO GIVE THE INDIAN RECREATION CLUB JUNIORS VICTORY OVER THE POLICE RECREATION CLUB IN THEIR FIRST LEAGUE FIXTURE OF THE SEASON. HE TOOK 7 WICKETS FOR 36 RUNS, BUT THE POLICE SURPRISED THE JUNIOR CHAMPIONS BY WINNING BY 20 RUNS. T. R. HUNTER CLAIMING 5 WICKETS FOR 25 RUNS.

Bowlers gained the upper hand in yesterday's friendly matches and several very useful figures were recorded. At King's Park A. B. Griffin took 7 wickets for 9 runs to give the Navy a six wickets victory over St. Joseph's College.

Craigenower have discovered a new bowler of immense possibilities in L. Hubbard. Yesterday he captured 6 wickets for 23 runs against the Indian Recreation Club, senior champions. His splendid bowling nearly gave Craigenower victory by a comfortable margin, only A. A. Rumjahn, the I.R.C. captain, facing him with any degree of confidence. Rumjahn scored 50 not out in a total of 92. B. R. Iranee displayed good all round form at the Valley where he took 5 wickets for 16 runs and scored 37 not out against the Recreation Club. At Pokfulam E. F. Fincher followed up his score of 71 last week by scoring 62 which included nine boundary hits and two fives. He played a characterless innings throughout, his square cut yielding him most of his boundary hits. A. M. Rodrigues, the new 'Varsity skipper, showed splendid form in his first innings of the season while scoring 48 of the 'Varsity total of 102.

PEASANTS SMILE AT DEPRESSION

Balkans Last Land Of Romance Simple Folk Toil On Mediaeval Farms

(By Pembroke Stephens.)

I HAVE just toured through seven Central European and Balkan countries, curious to see how they and their people have weathered the economic hurricane which is sweeping across the world.

What I saw surprised me. Surprisingly little distress, surprisingly cheerful faces, surprising absorption in parochial life and indifference to the troubled affairs of the wider world. The Balkans are the last lands of romance in Europe. As yet their contact with civilisation has been comparatively slight; that is why civilisation's ailments appear to have affected them so little, even though agriculture, the chief industry, is in dire straits.

I shall try, in a series of brief pictures, to convey to you an impression of life as it is lived to-day in out-of-the-way corners of Austria, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Roumania, Bulgaria and Greece.

Work for the Central European peasant begins early in the morning and ends very late. His few acres of land still resemble the "strips" familiar to students of farming in the Middle Ages. His crops, compared to those in English fields, appear thin and weedy. Unplanted on Saturday morning, lying out to dry on Saturday afternoon.

Women's dresses are thickly embroidered at the arms; men's costumes are remarkable for the broad metal encrusted belt and little cap fitted with an eagle's feather. Strange Dress.

In Serbia children and adults dress exactly alike with almost ludicrous results—little girls in "grown-up" petticoats and skirts, little boys in white jackets and long trousers. Here, too, there are no toys for children. Boys stand an enormous church, and apart from the village, on a little hill and hidden among trees, the baroque castle of the lord-of-the-maneur.

Religion, rather than personal ambition or family affection, remains the key-note to the peasant's life. Every little house is filled with holy pictures.

And though the influence of lords of manors has waned, though the castles of once-mighty feudal chiefs stand in ruins, in craggy hilltops, the modes of life down in the villages remain almost untouched by time. Quaint customs still abound.

Still the young suitors' courtship tactics include the practice of "winnowing"—persuading the young woman to come to her window facing on the village street to listen to an orgy of compliment-making. Marriages, though, are nowadays often long deferred on account of shortage of means, and it is quite usual for an engaged couple to have several children before being wed in church.

National peasant costumes have survived longer in Czechoslovakia than in Austria. They are worn on Sundays, and it is amusing to see entire sets of finery, washed and plated on Saturday morning, lying out to dry on Saturday afternoon.

Women's dresses are thickly embroidered at the arms; men's costumes are remarkable for the broad metal encrusted belt and little cap fitted with an eagle's feather. Strange Dress.

In Serbia children and adults dress exactly alike with almost ludicrous results—little girls in "grown-up" petticoats and skirts, little boys in white jackets and long trousers. Here, too, there are no toys for children. Boys carry walking sticks, and if some kind-hearted foreigner presents a little girl with a doll she will put it in the window for show.

I saw Serbian babies suspended in slings from the branches of trees, quietly rocking in the breeze, while their mothers worked in the fields. Throughout the Balkans women work tremendously hard. In Montenegro only women work. The men spend the day strutting about in gorgeous scarlet and black uniforms, fingering the knives and pistols in their sashlike belts. The scarlet in their costumes signifies blood, the black mourning for the battle of Cossovo, the Field of the Slavs.

In Carinthia, the border province separating Austria from Jugoslavia, gruesome wooden figures are taken in procession to church on Sundays as a guard against hysterical afflictions affecting women. In fact, the gruesome predominates in this part of the world. Here the Egyptian custom of honouring the skeleton at the feast is encouraged to stress the transitory nature of life and the folly of forgetting death. On Saturday night, when the family is gathered round the hearth, little wooden models showing bodies in coffins are placed upon the supper table as a reminder.

"Death Sunday" is still performed in Czechoslovakia, but this is a jolly rite, celebrating the end of winter and the coming of Spring. A doll dressed up to represent Winter is burned on the village green, and the ashes are thrown into the nearest stream or simply scattered to the four winds.

Many curious Central European customs centre in the dance. At village-green dances in peasant Hungary girls throw a handkerchief over a youth's shoulder to inform him of their desire to dance with him, and seal the request with a kiss.

The most attractive village in the Balkans—the most attractive, to my mind, in the world—is Gruda, on the border between Dalmatia and rocky Herzegovina, under the shadow of bleak and mountainous Montenegro, not far from the sea. They call it the Village of Millionaires. Nowhere in Europe are the peasants poorer than in the surrounding districts, nowhere richer than in Gruda.

HEE-HAW!

"My husband has just won a donkey race at the seaside," writes a correspondent. Another reader says her husband can't run for tuffee.

Joke About Surgeons.
"Some husbands are quite incapable of carving at the table." Surgeons, for instance, have been known to make a neat incision in the joint and skilfully sew it up again.

From cricket to kick-it.

REVISED VISION.

GARBOLONEY.
"A great deal written about a certain famous film star is absolute nonsense," I read.

ONE-THIRD RIGHT.
"What's wrong with bread and cheese and beer for lunch?" asks an article on hiking. Only the bread and cheese.

THAT'S SOMETHING.
It is estimated that Hollywood turns out 5,000 different films a year. Well, the titles are different.

HINT.
If Kanertonyntatverponti, an Indian visitor, were to go to Llan-fairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwlillandysillllogogoch, a small Welsh village, I should not try to send him a postcard.

AWKWARD.
Potatoes take the place of money in some rural districts of Germany. How to pocket change for half a hundredweight without spoiling the set of the new lounge coat must be a problem.

CONSOLING.
An M.P. says that his wife often sits sewing while he prepares his speeches. It must be comforting to feel that one of the family is doing something useful.

Idea for Tax Collectors.
A doctor says that we live now—days twelve years longer than we used to. If that's the case, they ought to reduce the income-tax, because it's spread over a greater number of years.

Very Suspicious.
A traveller on the continent was recently detained because his passport aroused suspicion. Perhaps the photograph resembled him, or something.

A USEFUL PHRASE.
A foreign film star at Hollywood was given two months to learn English. I understand that, in view of a possible visit to England, she can already say "Burel year. I think your cops are the cat's pyjamas."

SOVIET ADMIRES AMERICA

Britain Sedate By Comparison

Russians Eager To Learn Magic

WORSHIP OF MACHINERY

(By Miss Jennie Lee.)

WHEN Emil Ludwig asked Stalin why Russian people are so friendly disposed towards the Americans, the Bolshevik leader showed no sign of outrage. Nor yet did he recite the Communist enthusiasm about the impossibility of friendship between a Communist and a Capitalist State.

Instead, he quietly replied that his countrymen admired the sweep and thoroughness of American large-scale industry.

In many curious ways there are striking resemblances as well as differences between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Both, for instance, make Britain seem by comparison very middle-aged and sedate in all its customs and institutions. Where we count costs and make a sober estimate of possible results, America and Russia become intoxicated with a super-sized idea, immediately start trying it out in an improvised kind of way, and only by a process of trial and error, sometimes expensively and painfully find out whether or not the scheme is workable.

To criticise either when actually in their midst is very difficult. It is like throwing cold water over the head of an enthusiast of a child. They are so eager so buoyantly confident of success in all that they plan to do. Or at least that was true until quite recently. Just at present America is feeling badly under the weather and groping rather helplessly in search of lost securities and successes.

But the United States were as clearly young as Russia now is. America, too, conceived of industrial development in large scale, even grandiose terms, and with exuberant self-confidence hastened to apply every new idea that occurred to it.

It is this side of American life and temperament that fascinates the Russians. They are eager to learn the magic lore that has made the American the high priest of the machine.

American instructors. Wherever the Five Year Plan is in progress, and that is everywhere from the Arctic to the Black Sea—American machinery and American technical experts are sure to be close at hand, instructing and guiding the apprentice hand of Russia.

There is a curious paradox about Soviet life which those who travel in the U.S.S.R. as ordinary Russian workers do that is, without any of the special provisions made for organised tours and delegations from abroad, are quickly made to realise.

In the Five Year Plan Russian ideas follow the largest and quickest models in existence, and even then aim at showing the rest of the world how to hustle. But in the detail services of life, nothing on earth can persuade the ordinary Russian to act with even a third of the speed one is accustomed to in Britain and America.

Soviet policy is attempting to make skilled industrial workers out of millions of slow-moving, semi-literate peasants, and to do so without any large number of experienced people already on the spot to guide them, or without allowing time for gradual assimilation.

Look For Guidance. There can be no doubt that the tempo of service has been immensely improved within recent years, and that Russia is losing much of its old Oriental ideas of time and distance. But this is not enough for the Soviet authorities. They want ascendancy. * * * Cockney Capping. A teacher in a very poor district in London wrote a verse on the blackboard, and asked his boys, who were Cockneys, to write a verse to follow it. The teacher's verse was:—

There was a little swallow who in winter flew to Spain,
 But with returning summer's warmth
 Flew quickly back again.
 All the children failed in their attempt to match the lines intelligently, with the exception of one young hopeful, who wrote:—

On the journey back again
 He met a bloomin' 'awk
 What pulled out all his feathers
 And said, "Now, you blighter, walk."

Hard Times in Clubland. The decision of a special general meeting of the National Liberal Club to admit non-political members is another reflection of the hard times which for the last few years London "clubland" has endured.

The National Liberal was far and away the biggest club organisation in the country, and for a long time in its history flourished in a condition of great financial prosperity. Through no fault of its own, however, it fell on evil days, and, in common with other institutions, both political and social, it has experienced such a falling off of members that portals must be opened to the unorthodox or closed altogether. The new inclusion is limited to 750 all of whom must be vouched for by two serving members as personally and socially desirable.

American pep and push behind every counter and every factory machine, so once again they look to their Capitalist neighbour for guidance and inspiration.

There is nothing that America knows about speeding-up devices and scientific rationalisation that Russia is not eager to learn. What ever fault Bolshevik leaders may have, sentimentalism is not one of them. They take no high moral line against piece rates and speeding-up methods, but on the contrary denounce those who dare murmur against the application of such in Soviet workshops as bourgeois romanticists or counter-revolutionaries.

It may well be asked whether the spectacle of widespread slump, unemployment, and hunger in America following a period of unparalleled industrial expansion does not discourage Soviet Union in its pursuit of similar industrial technique.

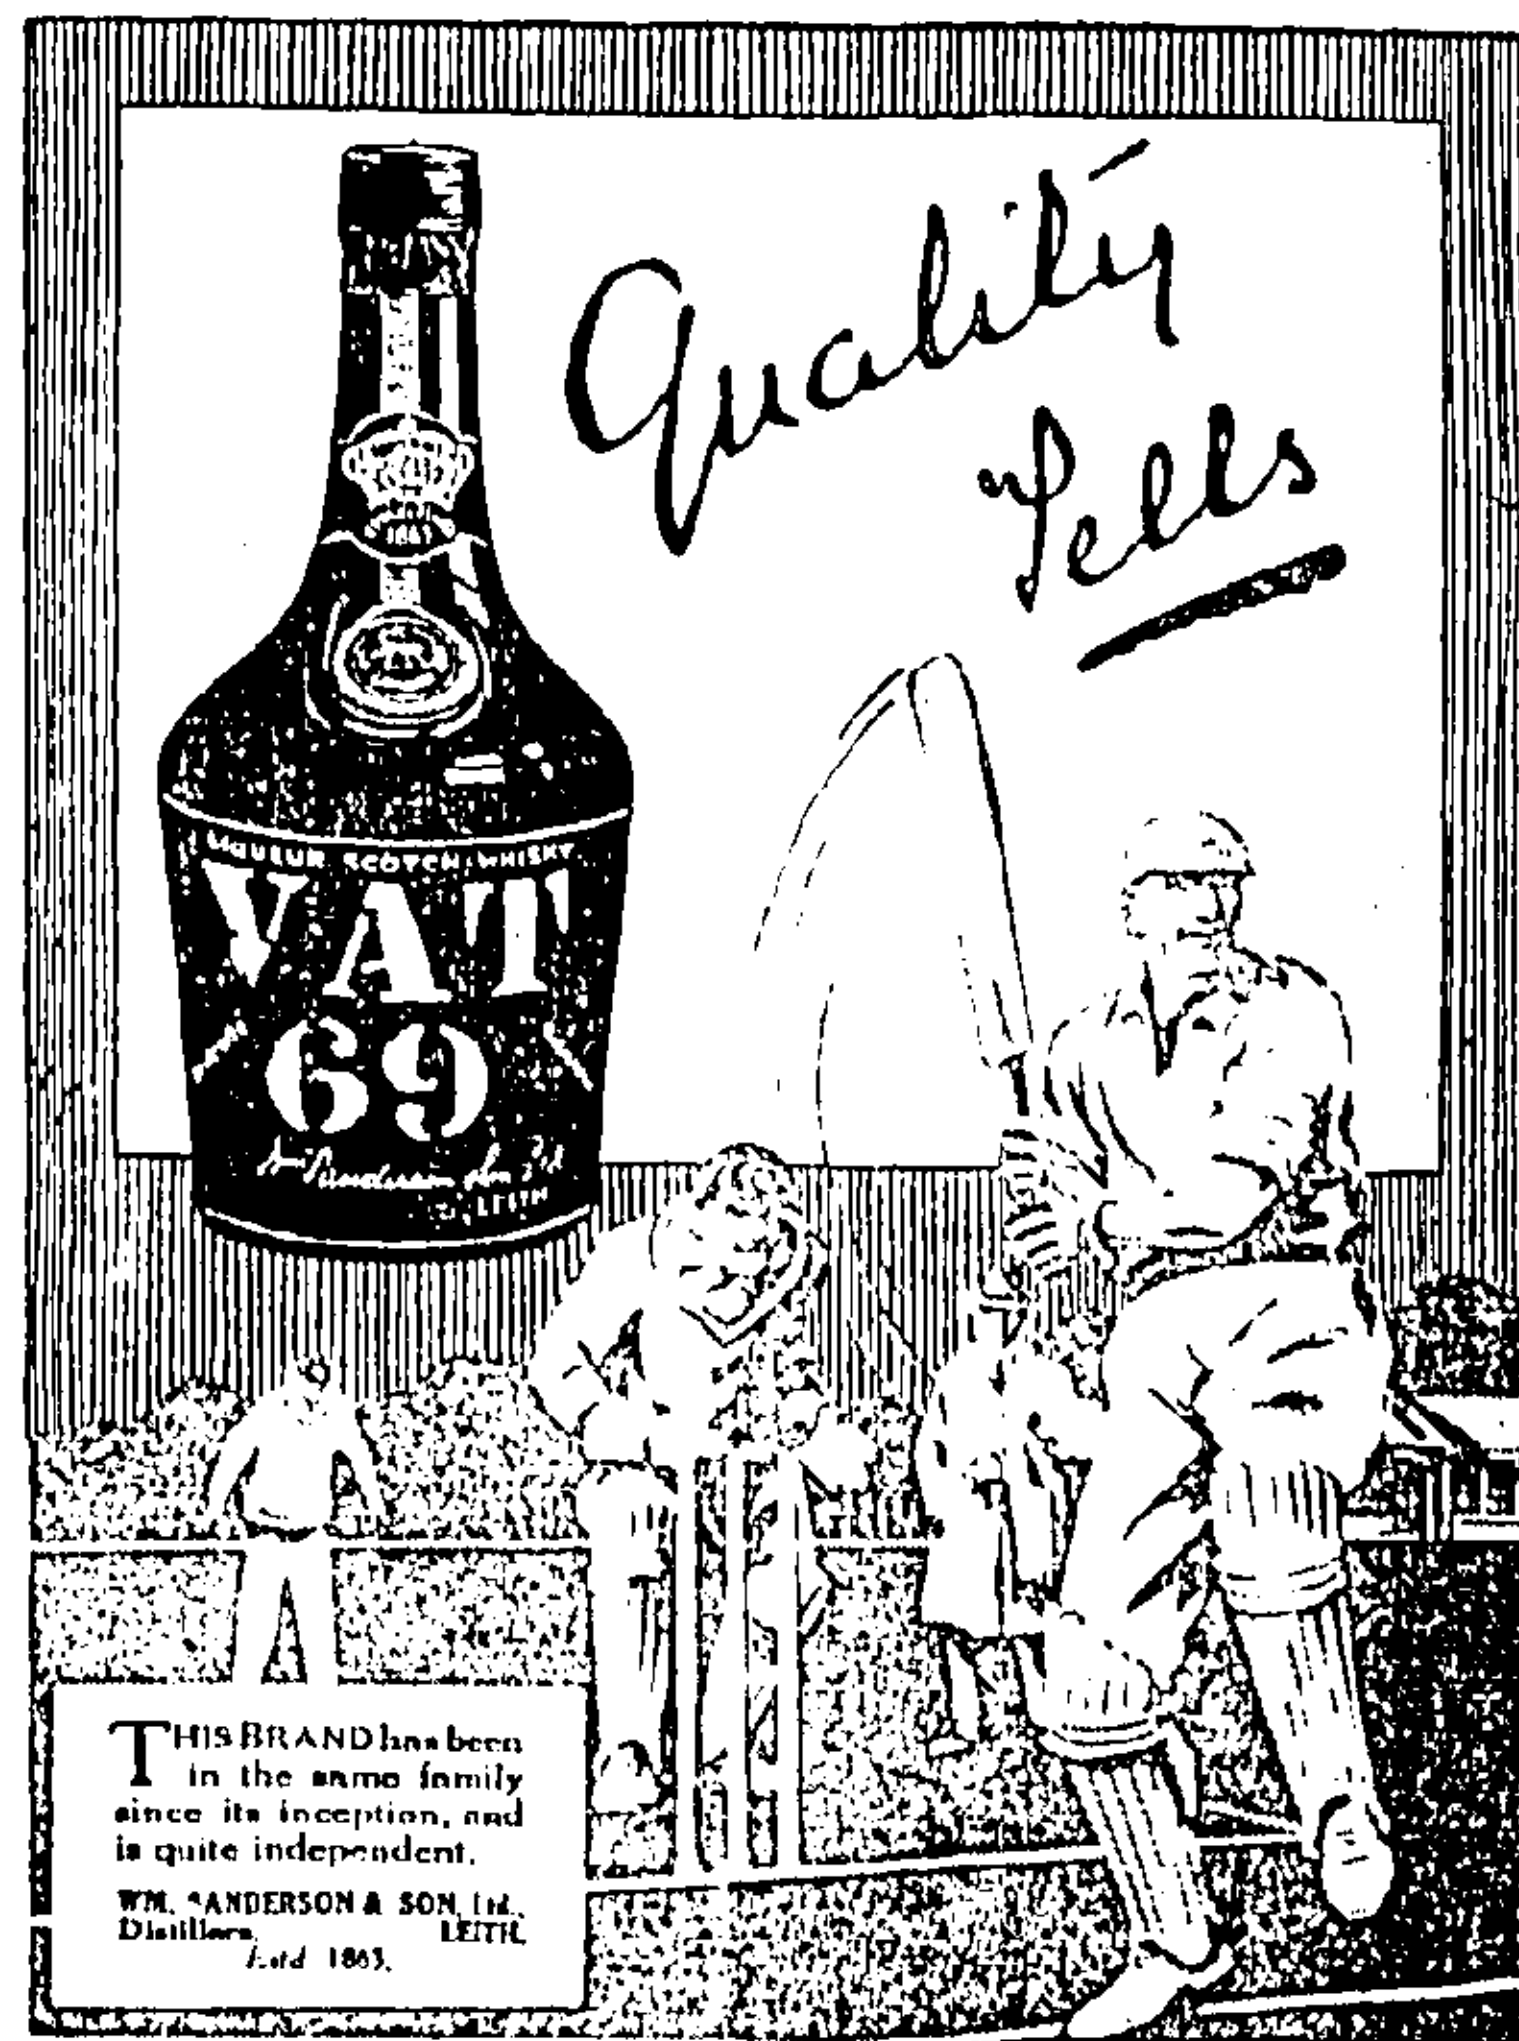

No such doubt ever occurs to the Russian. He makes a hard division in his thinking between the American methods of production which he is so eager to master and American methods of ownership and distribution which he equally vehemently condemns.

Capitalism, he will tell you, has fulfilled its historic function in solving the problem of mass production. Socialism, and beyond that Communism, must now be applied in order to solve the remaining problem of just and regulated consumption. Booms and slumps, unemployment, overwork and the right to live luxuriously without working at all will all alike, he claims, be swept out of existence under just Socialist distribution.

Can They Succeed? When a house is in process of construction, with loose bricks and exposed drain-pipes lying around, it is seldom easy to picture the finished result.

Soviet Russia to-day is far from being a completed example of a new type of society. It is still in process of construction. It started off from abysmally low pre-war standards. It has had to scramble upwards over the havoc caused in the years of war, famine and revolution.

It is fourteen years since Lenin seized power, but there is still too much scaffolding around the building for the final and permanent structure of New Russia to be clearly visible. Whether it will succeed where America has failed is a question that has yet to be answered.

HONG KONG—THE IDEAL CHRISTMAS GIFT.

A REALLY attractive photo of Hong Kong, made up as a calendar for 1933, is a bit of Hong Kong that can be sent home this Christmas.

Our new calendars and Christmas cards, with real photo views of Hong Kong taken by Mr. E. A. von Kobza-Nagy, the well known art photographer, are already proving their attraction, though we have shown them less than a week.

Typical of Chinese life here, some show the crowded streets, harbour junks, types of the children and people, while others show the beauties of the colony, with night scenes and many unusual and attractive aspects.

Calendars are not dutiable and postage is very little. We are sure you will be pleased to send our photo calendars and cards and they will give pleasure as a bit of Hong Kong of permanent value and interest.

HONG KONG, SUNDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1932.

Hong Kong And The Empire.

HONG KONG'S part in the new economic unit formed within the British Empire as a result of the Ottawa Conference is naturally small and the announcement of the Imperial agreements was attended with slight reaction locally. Speculation had been rife concerning the nature and form of the tariff the Colony was to impose us, while appreciation was felt of the fact that trade restrictions in the port must be kept to a minimum, recognition was general that the Colony would make some contribution, even if it amounted to little more than a patriotic gesture. Imports of liquor, tobacco or automobiles were thought most likely to receive official attention, and surprise was occasioned when the motor trade was selected to bear practically all the burden. Except for a preference for brandy of Empire origin, the whole discrimination is a 20 per cent. tax on non-British motor vehicles, to be paid in the form of a special licence fee, in addition to the ordinary licence fee, which special fee will amount to 20 per cent. of the value of the vehicle, including cost, freight and insurance. While this impost will be unpopular with dealers of foreign cars, and also with motorists who are already handicapped by the low value of the dollar, no undue objection can be raised. However, protest against the fact that the tax is made retrospective through its application to cars already imported seems justified. The Government has adopted an unusual course in applying the tax in this manner and an exemption should be made in cases where stocks had been landed here before the tax came into force. The objects of the tax, apart from its force as a loyal gesture, are presumably to benefit the British manufacturer, but there is small prospect of any great advantage resulting. But if an added incentive is provided the British manufacturer then the duty will gain in merit. Mainly because the American car is better adapted to the needs of the Colony, the United States supplied over 80 per cent. of the $2,118,993 worth of motor vehicles and chassis imported into the Colony in 1931. Great Britain accounted for only 12.5 of that total. Great advance has been made in the Dominions' markets recently, and it is likely that British cars will be made more popular in Hong Kong.

The Government is reticent concerning the compensation the Colony is to receive for its motor tariff and it may be that the matter is still under consideration. An early announcement would be welcomed and possibly motorists will be appeased to some extent if they receive even a slight quid pro quo. Reviewing the Imperial agreements from other aspects the impression is gained that an excellent start has been made towards welding the Empire into a strong economic unit. Naturally many of the trade arrangements made are along experimental lines but they appear fundamentally sound, and while amendments are inevitable, substantial ground exists for the hope that they will eventually be enlarged and improved. The Dominions, with the larger and safer market for their agricultural products, are well satisfied, and British industry will be stimulated by the reciprocal preferences extended by the Dominions. The main fears concern the effect on food prices in the United Kingdom, but the sporadic outbursts that have been made to date about "dearer bread" have been exaggerated, and the boon to British industry will offset any burden that may accrue from a slight increase in the cost of living.

CHUN SHING SCHOOL PRIZE-GIVING.

Mr. Ma Ying-pui
Addresses Large Crowd.

A large crowd was present in the hall of the Hop Yai Church, Bonham Road, last night, on the occasion of the graduation of pupils and the distribution of prizes to the students of the Chun-shing Typewriting School. Mr. Ma Ying-pui who spoke a few words to the pupils distributed the diplomas and awards.

RESULTS.

Of this number 18 and 28 respectively passed. The most successful student in the Senior division attained a speed of 60 words per minute, after a course of four months training.

He also announced that the annual typewriting competition for past and present pupils would be held in December.

The successful candidates in the Junior examinations were as follows:—

News In Brief.

A flannel dance for members of the C.B.A. and their friends will be held in the Central British School hall on Wednesday, October 26.

A clean bill of health for the Colony is reported for the 24 hours ending October 14, no cases of notifiable disease being shown on the return from the Medical Officer of Health.

Another popular symphonic concert will be given at the Peninsula Hotel to-night. The programme includes an interesting variety of numbers and some exceptional Solo work.

Licensing Sessions will be held in the Council Chamber on Friday, November 4, at 2.30 p.m., when 21 applications will be considered. Five of this number are new applications, two being from Kowloon.

For his attempt to snatch a silver wrist watch from the arm of the complainant, Lam Lin, 28, was sentenced to six months' hard labour brought before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Central Magistracy yesterday morning.

According to the Health Bulletin for Eastern Ports, only three cases of cholera occurred in Shanghai during the week ending October 8, while a similar number is reported from Canton and Pnom-Penh. Calcutta reports 11 cases and Manila and Saigon one case each. Six cases are reported from Amoy.

Mr. Lim Wan-kei, Chairman of the Kwangtung Provincial Construction Commission, has urged upon the Government establishment of an agricultural bank for peasants.

JAPAN'S PHILOSOPHER LIVES IN SLUM

ANTICIPATES ARRIVAL OF COMMUNISM

THE CHRISTIAN WEAPON

(By E. L. ALLEN.)

THOSE of us who find ourselves compelled to side with China in her present dispute with Japan could hardly make a greater mistake than if we were to allow our sympathy with the one country to pass over into hostility towards the other. The real enemy is never a country taken as a whole, but certain groups of individuals and certain vested interests in it. Perhaps it would be even truer to say that the real enemy is certain ideas of national prestige and honour which are peculiarly at home in Tokyo but are to be found in every capital in the world. If two nations were ever made for friendship and co-operation, Japan and China are those two, and it would be a tragedy if they were to be permanently antagonistic.

During the war, a young subaltern came home from France badly wounded. While on convalescent leave, he called on the minister of the church to which he was attached. "What would you say from the pulpit if you were in my position?" the minister asked. The reply was the somewhat unexpected one, "If I were in your position I should say everything good that I know about the Germans." At this moment when feeling is so tense, we who sympathise with China could hardly do better than make for ourselves a rule that we will say everything good about Japan that we know. And it is possible to find a great deal to say.

For example, when we are tempted to think of Japan as the representative of militarism and imperialistic aggression in the world of today, it is well to remind ourselves that perhaps the most internationally-minded man alive at this moment is a Japanese. He is Tokoyiko Kagawa, the Japanese St. Francis of Assisi, as he has been called. He is living in a poor apartment in one of the worst slums of Tokyo, accepting for himself a life of poverty, and happy in it because through it he serves the needy and the workers of his country.

But he is not content with words. In many Japanese village co-operative societies have been formed under his guidance. These deliver the peasant from the grip of the money-lender and create a store of wealth to be held in common and to be used as each man has need of it. He has even introduced the co-operative pawn shop, at which articles can be pledged at a fair rate of interest and the proceeds of the sale of unredeemed pledges are returned to the owner! Kagawa has the greatest admiration for the work of the British co-operative movement and he holds that this, given a Christian leadership, is the alternative alike to the capitalism which is dying amid the general distress and the communism on which some look with hope and more with fear.

He was born at Kobe in 1888. Brought up in Buddhism, he became a Christian as a young man and resolved to enter the Christian ministry, a decision which meant that he was disowned by his family and disinherited. Meeting one day an ex-soldier, a veteran of the war with Russia, who had gone

Charge Grew Out Of Clay Pot Assault.

HEROISM OF LEUNG.

An unusual case of assault was brought to the attention of Mr. Schofield at the Central Police Court yesterday morning when Leung Lau appeared on a charge of hitting his best friend, Kwan Yuk-ping, with a clay pot.

According to the evidence, Leung struck Kwan first, Kwan retaliated by throwing the clay pot which missed Leung by inches. Leung picked it up, and with a mighty heave, crashed it into Kwan's face. Injuries resulted.

Leung took Kwan to the hospital to be treated and then went to the police station heroically to give himself up. As he entered the station the phone rang with a report from the hospital to the effect that Kwan had been admitted with minor cuts and abrasions to his head. Leung posted but and went his way.

Yesterday morning in Court, further proof of his heroic nature was apparent, for he proudly wore an Emmanuel Raphael Bellios Life Saving Medal, covering half his chest. He had earned it, according to the medal, for saving life at sea in 1929.

Kwan was also in Court, not much the worse for his experience. He was ready to forgive Leung; and did. However, His Worship suggested that they both post a

TYRE WEAR SUBJECT TO 8 FACTORS.

Tests Reveal Effect Of New Conditions.

Eight major factors to present-day driving conditions govern tyre performance, according to technical experts of the United States Rubber Co. These factors are: Speed, temperature and weather, road surface, and topography, starting and stopping, inflation and loads, small diameter wheels and low centres of gravity, brake adjustments and alignment and mechanical adjustments.

An idea of the effect of speed may be gained from the following figures: Assuming that a speed of 30 miles an hour represents 100 per cent., an increase to 50 miles an hour reduces the amount of mileage to 75 per cent.; at 65 miles per hour mileage drops to 63 per cent.; and at 70 miles per hour to 55 per cent.

The Temperature. Further tests revealed that temperature plays an important part in tread wear. Regarding 70 degrees as 100 per cent., an increase to 80 degrees reduces mileage to 80 per cent.; an increase to 90 degrees reduces mileage to 64 per cent. Or in the other direction, a decline in temperature from 70 to 60 degrees increases mileage to 125 per cent. These figures are based on a constant speed of 30 miles per hour.

If at the same time speed should be increased from 30 to 50 miles an hour and temperature from 70 to 90 degrees tyre performance, as measured by tread wear, would drop to one-half.

SPEED LIMITS ABOLITION.

Improvement In Driving Noted.

A cutting from the London Daily Telegraph contains some interesting comments, particularly in view of recent and reported giving comparative traffic accident figures in England before and after the abolition of nominal speed limits.

In spite of the huge total of road casualties in 1931, revealed by the Home Secretary in the House of Commons recently, stated the cutting, automobile organisations assert, on the evidence of their road patrols and other observers, that there has been a genuine improvement in the standard of driving since the new Road Act came into force.

It is contended that the increase in the number of injured—from 177,895 to 202,119—is more apparent than real.

Sir Herbert Samuel, in the House of Commons on February 4 last, pointed out that the police were able to obtain fuller information through the institution of motor patrols and the requirements of the Road Traffic Act.

The Act makes it obligatory to report to the police every accident in which injury to persons or animals is caused.

It is also argued that the decrease in the number killed as compared with 1931—514—far outweighs the greater number of non-fatal accidents—a view which was supported recently by an official of the National Safety First Association.

UNWELCOME MASCOT.

A Rochester resident who went to collect his motor cycle from a shed near the station found what he thought was a rope coiled round the handlebars. It turned out to be a 2½-foot snake, which had probably arrived in a consignment of bananas.

BRITAIN LEADS.

At the end of June Ceylon boasted 3,281 motor cycles, of which 2,966 were made in Great Britain, and 263 in America.

Morris Motor Works At Oxford

Intricate Operations Simplified

MANY INTERESTING PROCESSES

In a fashion that reminds one of the foreign visitor who attempts to tour London in a motor car, a technical member of the staff of the Morris Motor Works at Oxford relates the following experience of how he recently endeavored to claim into a couple of hours a survey of the great factory near Oxford where Morris cars are put together. This is not only a unit in the Morris organization, as it is tied with engines, gearboxes and other components from separate works in Coventry and in Birmingham. The Oxford plant is therefore, concerned with the assembly of the various types of private car chassis, with coachwork, and with the finishing of complete vehicles.

Experts have a way of making intricate co-ordinated operations seem simple and straightforward, and this accounts for the fact that a strong impression left by a lightening tour of the Morris factory is that the work in the various departments is carried out with an unhampered smoothness very different from the hasty-burly which one is apt to associate with production on a large scale.

Care for detail in organizing the view is used to carry the trucks work and left handling by the individual workers are responsible. Between the two people for this state of affairs. With a weekly output of more than a thousand units of various types, every tiny point of manufacture must be watched with incessant care to ensure a smooth flow from the factory, and consequently this very watchfulness results in a high degree of efficiency in the finished product.

How Axles are Built

The first steps in chassis construction consists of assembling various units, such as axles, ready for attachment to the chassis frame. Many interesting details were noticed here, amongst which may be mentioned the method employed to adjust wheel alignment at the end of the front axle assembly section. This process, which is generally known as tracking the wheels, is carried out at the works in the absence of wheels. It is done by bolting an accurately machined bar of steel across each front hub, then using a gauge to measure the distance separating the ends of the bars. The gauge is "stepped" to an extent representing the toe-in allowance, and the operation quickly sets the track rod adjustment to give the desired result.

The back axle assembly line commences with a kind of mechanical maypole on which the axles are arranged radially, swinging round as they are gradually completed. They leave the maypole for an assembly line where other parts such as the Lockheed brakes, semi-elliptic springs, torque tubes, etc., are added. Temporary wheels are then fitted and the complete axles pushed away like a wheelbarrow.

Four Chassis Assembly Lines

Components such as those flew towards the chassis assembly lines, of which there are four—the first carries the Minor and the Family Eight the second the Cowley models with alternative engine sizes, the third the six-cylinder Major and Oxford types, and the fourth the six-cylinder Engine-gearbox units which as already explained, arrive from other Morris plants, are fitted with carburetors and other accessories, and are then lowered to the chassis assembly lines by pneumatic hoists located at appropriate points. Each finished chassis is rolled off

IMPORTANCE OF GOOD BRAKES.

Hints On Ensuring Adjustment.

MODERN TESTING.

The adjustment of the brakes is so important that it is wise—in fact imperative—to make use regularly of the modern brake testing and adjusting plants installed in many well-known garages and service stations.

The machines employed ensure that the brake adjustments are evened-up in the right way, and it invariably follows that they remain in their adjustment for a considerably longer period than was the case when the old-fashioned, haphazard methods were followed. The wear is even, less pressure is required to give good retardation, and there is less tendency for the brakes to operate unevenly, so affecting the steering or causing a skid.

Never neglect brake adjustment. Always keep the brakes in tip-top condition, and even if the adjusting nuts are inaccessible, as unfortunately is often the case, even today, make the best of a bad job with the knowledge that one will be well repaid for the difficulties overcome.

There are, incidentally, various jobs which need occasional attention in connection with the brake gear. All bearings must, of course, be lubricated, say, once a week or every so many miles, as recommended by the manufacturers' lubrication chart. Stick to these instructions; they are prepared for the owner-driver's benefit.

REMOVAL OF THE DRUMS.

At intervals the drums might be removed to facilitate the examination of the brake shoes and the linings. This is a fairly easy job on most cars; the wheel has to be taken off, which will reveal three or four counter-sunk screws holding the drum in position. If these be still or if the drum be rusted on to the wheel bolts, use a little penetrating oil, which will eat its way through the rust and ease the stiff component so that they can be removed fairly comfortably.

If a long period has elapsed since the drums were last removed it may be necessary even to tap them gently with a mallet from the inside, but be careful not to bend the back plate. If this is knocked off of truth a continual scraping will be heard as the drum revolves and sounds against the bent plate. It would involve a fair amount of trouble to dismantle and straighten out.

Examine the brake lining rivets. If they protrude at all or are even flush with the surface of the lining they should be driven home with a punch and hammer. Protruding rivets will score the inside of the drum and create a disconcerting screeching whenever the shoes are applied. They may also allow the lining to move on the shoe and end to buckle under application, causing fierceness or juddering, which is most disconcerting, particularly on a wet road surface. It is a simple job to drive the rivets home.

As a temporary measure they can be driven home with the brake shoes in position on the back anchor plate, using a hammer or a punch. The correct and satisfactory method however, is to remove the shoes completely and do the riveting properly. The rivets are disposed alternately on the left and right of the lining except close to the ends, where a pair in line is employed.

A FOUR-MILE QUEUE.

There was a queue of motor traffic for four miles at Wainfleet level crossing, near Skegness, on the evening of August Bank Holiday, complains Major W. A. Rogerson, the county surveyor for Holland, Lincolnshire. The gates were closed for the passage of special excursion trains. "The Autocar."

"STYLE," as applied to the Packard, has always meant something more.

Associated with it, logically and distinctively, is the other important word, "enduring"—a Packard characteristic for a third of a century.

So gradually and correctly has Packard style evolved—like the slow unfolding of a beautiful flower—it has never been at the mercy of that capricious mood which too often alienates to-morrow's style from that of to-day.

Maximum Motor Car Efficiency

Importance Of Correct Engine Lubrication

TAKE THE MAKER'S ADVICE

THE writer offers no apology for beginning this little essay upon certain small matters in connection with lubrication that are often disregarded, by once more pointing out for the benefit of the motorist that it cannot be reiterated too often that one thing which the wise motorist always does in his own interests is rigidly to adopt the car maker's recommendation as to engine oil. There are still many people who think they know better but they never do. There are, unfortunately, far more who imagine the well-known firms in the oil world are profiteers, and that to purchase nameless, nondescript, and incidentally non-guaranteed stuff is at once a gesture of economy and an act of charity. In point of fact it is neither.

There is plenty of competition between vendors of first-class oil to ensure that its price is reasonable. Having regard to the elaborate processes through which oil has to go in order to be first class the final product is distinctly inexpensive, particularly if it be bought in fair bulk, say five gallons at a time, by which method a considerable saving can generally be effected.

Suitability of Oil Used.

Let it be borne in mind that the car manufacturer is never swayed by any penny-farthing policy. He adopts the lubricant which he has experimentally proved to give the best results in his engines—and that is that. Several different oils may all have the same appearance to the untutored eye, but for a given job one may be superior to the others out of all comparison. The ordinary motorist cannot possibly tell which it is, and therefore for him to attempt to make experiments on his own account is simply waste of time, and will often turn out to be loss of much money as well.

An unsuitable oil will "work" but it may still greatly reduce both the power and the life of an engine, to say nothing of making decarbonising unduly frequent.

A point that is not regarded anything like so seriously as it should be is the fact that, granted there is the right quality of oil in the sump, it is still desirable that there should be the right quantity as well.

Nine out of ten drivers neglect this. They see that the oil gauge is registering the correct pressure, and they promptly assume that all is well. But it is in fact, only a conjecture. The oil gauge hand will not begin to fluctuate until the pump is already dangerously short of supply.

Let There Be No Excess.

The correct and wise procedure is regularly—that is, at short intervals—to keep the oil level up to the top reading of the dip-stick or other indicator. Of course, above this it must never be allowed to go. There is no saving to be obtained by refilling to do so, any more than there is by always running with a nearly empty petrol tank.

On the contrary, there is a great advantage in having a full sump, which the least technically-minded can easily appreciate. It lies in the fact that the oil is not only a lubricant, but also a vitally essential cooling medium. It is largely responsible for preventing the pistons getting unduly hot.

Having thus taken up heat it is necessary that it should be able to get rid of it. The larger the volume of oil present the better opportunity will it have of cooling, for since the quantity does not in the least affect the amount in circulation, the larger the former is the longer time will it have for cooling off and "settling" in the sump.

If there is only a small quantity—just enough to keep the pump submerged—it will tend to get very hot. That will, in itself, render it "thin" so that it will readily get past the pistons and be burnt in the combustion chambers with the creation of unnecessary "cokes." Thus consumption will go up, and maintenance charges will follow suit.

Complete Change.

Not only so, but the quality of the oil will rapidly deteriorate since, being already hot, it will only too readily carbonise on the underside of the piston crown, leading to the lubricant becoming charged with much solid impurity which cannot fail to have a harmful effect upon bearings and working parts of all kinds.

Apart from saving in money, having oil in bulk commends itself for the ease with which it enables replenishment to be made every day, if need be. Under average conditions twice a week should be sufficient.

And a second and equally important matter is that replenishment to a certain level is not enough in itself. If you want true economy in combination with the best possible results, you will, at least every two thousand miles, discharge the old oil in its entirety and fill up with fresh.

This sounds very wasteful, but it is easy enough to show that it is not so. Spread the cost of all-bulk oil over your mileage, and you will find that it adds to your running costs by only a minute fraction. In invisible running costs it effects a saving, for it defers the decarbonising intervals by a much as 50 per cent. The writer can testify that one car has to his knowledge done nearly 40,000 miles without decarbonising simply because the method has been regularly followed, and there is reason to believe that it will do as much more before its head requires to be removed. It will consequently be appreciated that the "extra" oil (if one may call that "extra" which is so necessary) has paid for itself several times over.

A Little-Known Point.

It may be remarked that it has been demonstrated both under test-bench and road conditions that, given plenty of fresh oil, a good engine will do its 100,000 miles before requiring overhaul. How many cars, however, initially good they may be, ever get anywhere near that figure? But plenty of them would if they were given the chance.

Very few drivers realise that the most critical conditions that an engine has to face occur within the first few minutes after it has been started up from cold. In this small period of time it can suffer a depreciation equivalent to several hundred miles of road work in normal circumstances.

In this connection there are two schools of popular thought—and both are equally wrong. One lets the engine "tick over" so as to warm itself up. This is a bad principle, because the pump works at so low a pressure that the oil is scarcely circulated at all, and thus does not reach its desired destination.

The other patronises the reverse mode. Directly the engine is in motion, it provides the wide throttle, and the ensuing roar well advertises that something is happening in a hurry. This is bad because the moving parts, under high revolutions, are heavily stressed. Horrible things like MV laws come into operation. The oil pump works nobly and achieves a splendid delivery. But, unhappily the pipes and ducts are (even in the summer) filled with viscous lubricant, which is not too willing to get out of the way.

No doubt some of the delivery gets through to its correct address—but not enough of it. Probably seizure rarely occurs, but nevertheless excessive wear and tear takes place. Certainly it is rough on the pistons, for they have a lot of work to do, and it may very well be minutes that have to elapse before there comes to them an adequate splash from the big ends of the connecting-rods.

COSTS OF "ROBOT" AND "BOBBY."

How does the cost of maintaining a four-post traffic "robot" compare with that of manning a street traffic point? This point is dealt with by the Liverpool City Treasurer in a volume of statistics which he has just prepared.

He states that the net annual cost to the city of keeping a policeman on point duty at a traffic post is £214, while the cost of operating a robot is £24. The cost of the four-post traffic robot signal is £168.

CARS AND THEIR FINGER-PRINTS.

Increasing Number Of Car Crimes.

The increasing number of crimes carried out with the aid of motor cars has led to the invention of a new department of criminology by Deputy Sheriff Chapman, of the Los Angeles Police. With the co-operation of other police departments in all parts of the world, he hopes to "finger print" motor cars so that identification becomes as simple and as certain as it is with human finger-prints.

The "finger-prints" of a car are the marks left by its tyres. So far the inventor of the new science has tabulated 447 different types of tyre, according to size, tread, and so forth. But these are only the main headings. Two cars of the same make, using the same type of tyre, will leave different marks, and can be distinguished by the expert.

By the new method the police are able to state the make of car with certainty in a few minutes. Any officer holding up a car of the suspected make, telephone headquarters for further instructions, and receives information which enables him to check up on the car's tyres by means of his manual of standards.—"The Autocar."

AUTO INDUSTRY DISAPPOINTED.

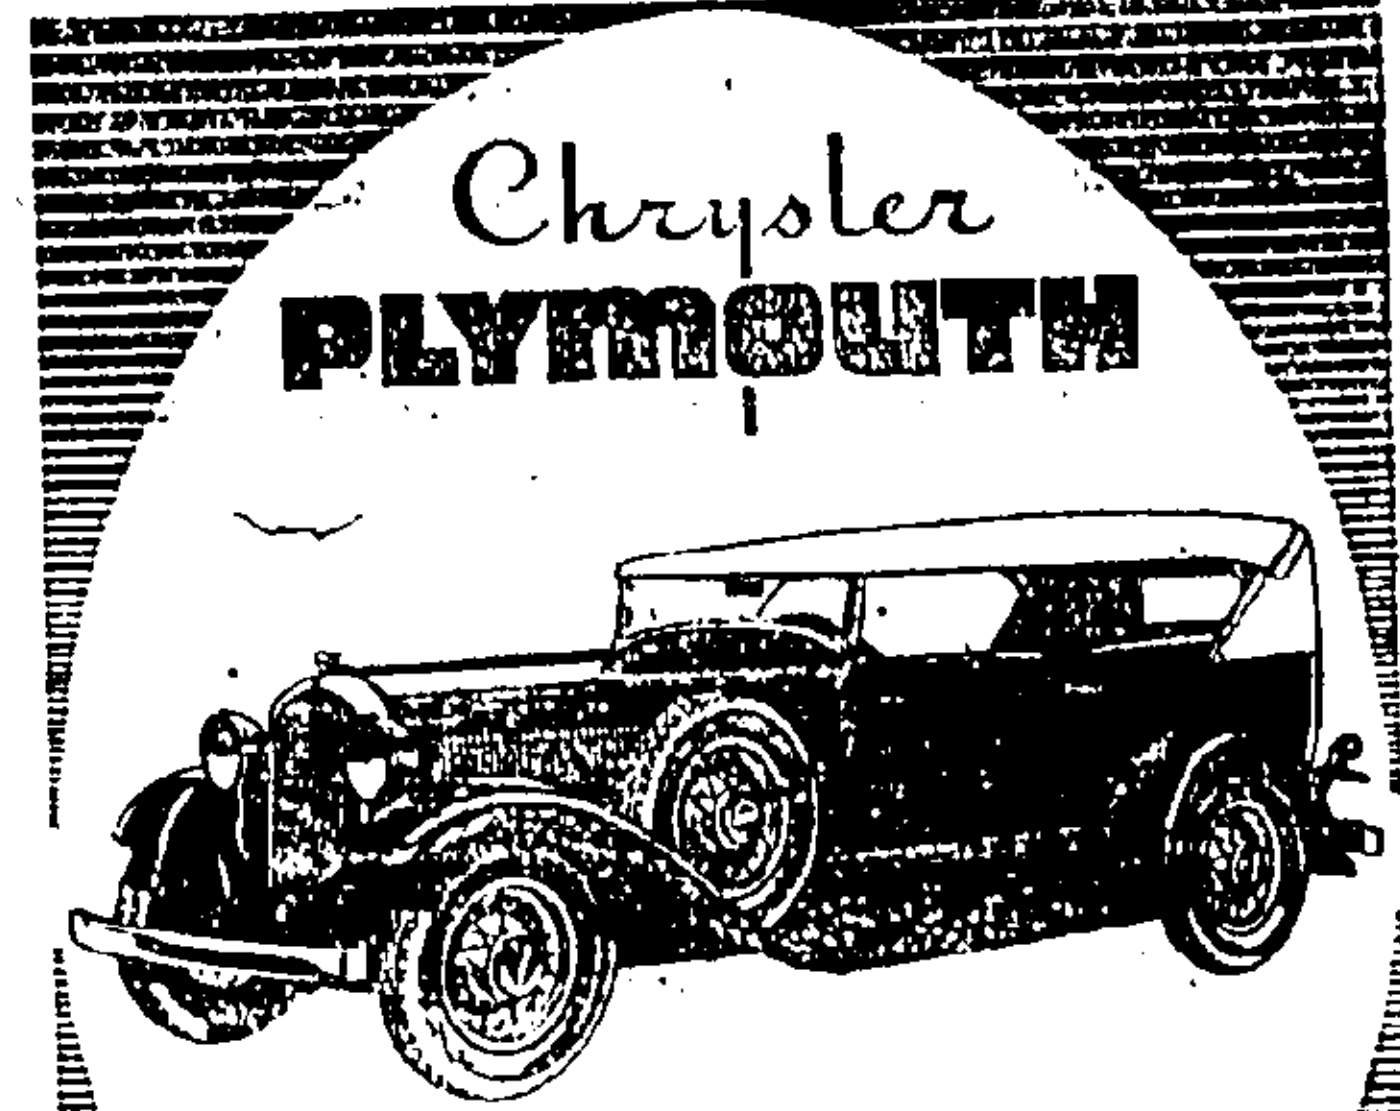

Optimistic Expectation Not Realized.

Detroit.

The optimistic belief that permeated the automobile industry during the early days of July that the month would show an encouraging demand for new cars, proved based on false hopes. Following long-established precedents of other years, July hung up a low production and sales record. At this writing accurate figures are not available, but, with few exceptions manufacturers will soon announce the actual July decrease.

There will be a very few who report an increase in production and they will not be particularly on account of greater demand from consumers, but rather a move to stock dealers and distributors with new models.

The State of Michigan is endeavouring to bring back to the highways 50,000 automobiles which are now idle in garages because owners have been unable financially to equip their cars with license plates.

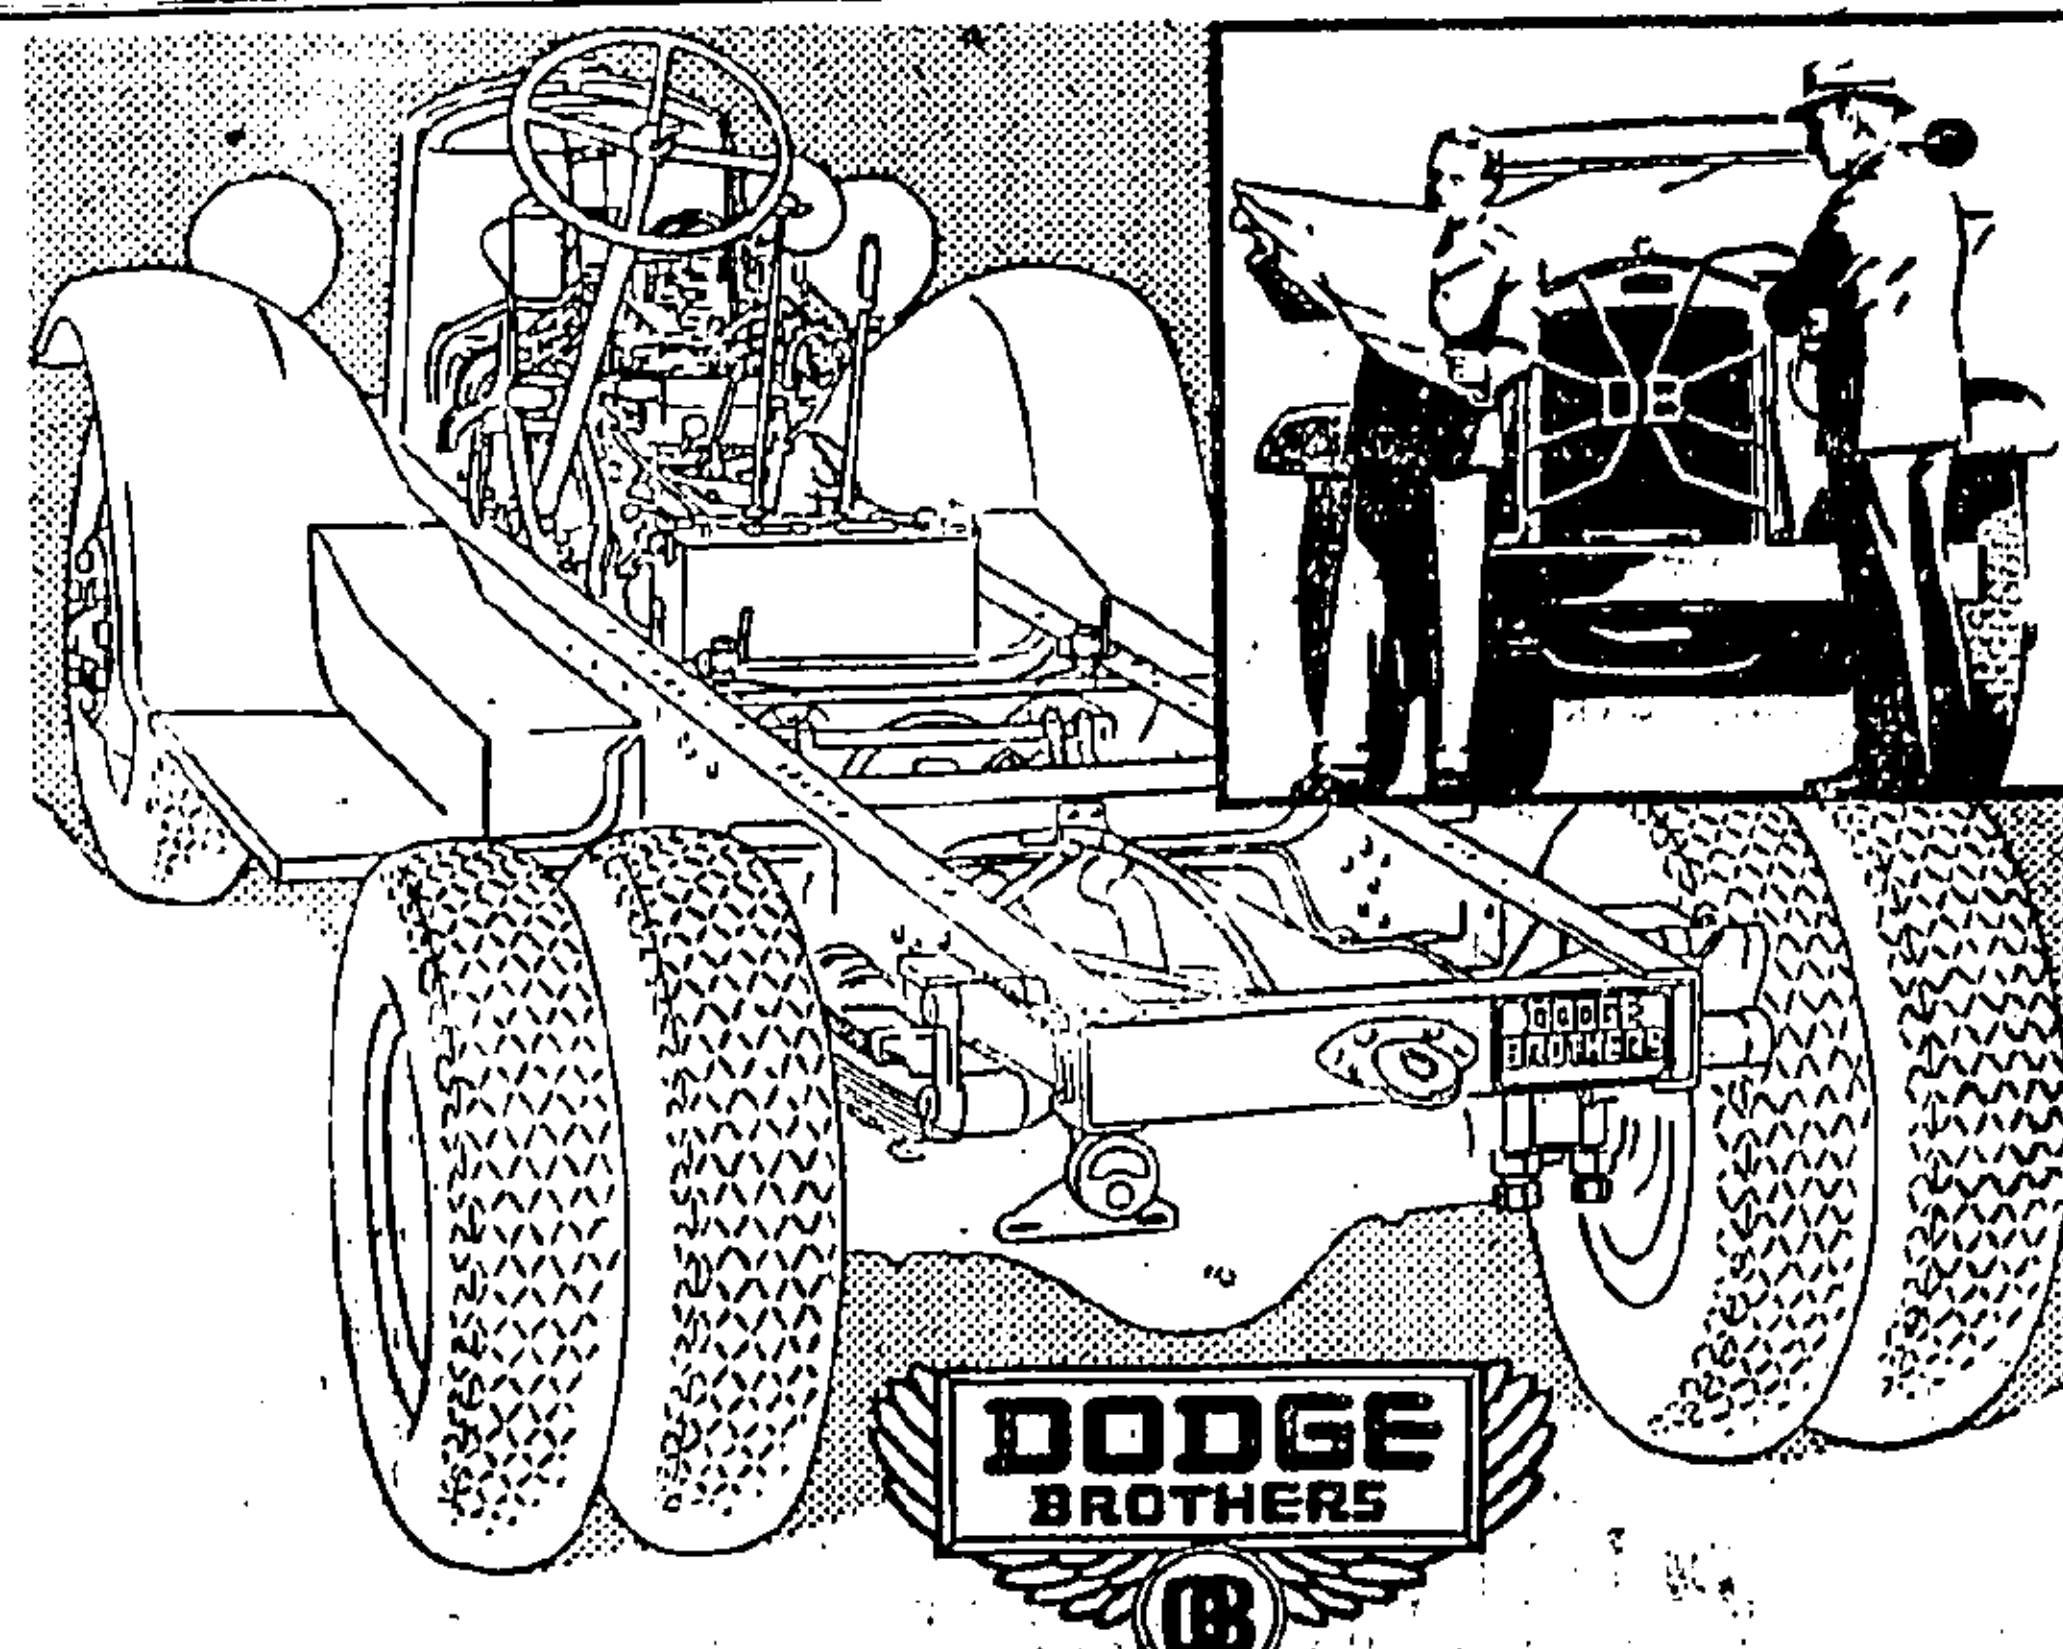

With Floating Power the new and finer Plymouth has the smoothness of an eight and the economy of a four. Vibration has been completely eliminated to give Plymouth a type of performance never before found in any but the highest priced cars.

BORDERERS SCORE 16 GOALS TO 1 IN THREE SOCCER DIVISIONS

LINCOLNS DEFEATED IN BOTH GAMES ATHLETIC TRIUMPH OVER SOUTH CHINA

16 GAMES YIELD 79 GOALS

BORDERERS MAKE DEBUT WITH NINE TO NIL DEFEAT.

HEAVY SCORING FEATURED YESTERDAY'S LEAGUE FOOTBALL. IN ALL THREE DIVISIONS, NO FEWER THAN 79 GOALS WERE SCORED IN THE SIXTEEN GAMES DOWN FOR DECISION. TWO HAD THE DISTINCTION OF SCORING THE HIGHEST AMOUNT OF THE DAY — DEFEATING EASTERN BY 9 GOALS TO NIL.

THE LINCOLNS WHO MADE SUCH AN AUSPICIOUS ENTRY INTO THE THREE DIVISIONS LAST SATURDAY, SUSTAINED DEFEATS IN THE TWO MATCHES THEY PLAYED IN YESTERDAY. THE BORDERERS, HOWEVER, UPHOLD THE MILITARY PRINCIPLE BY REGISTERING THREE CLEAR-CUT VICTORIES, SCORING NO FEWER THAN 16 GOALS AS AGAINST 1.

The Saints are now only one point behind the Borderers as the result of yesterday's surprise win over Kowloon — and the Saints fully deserved their success. The Club suffered their first reverse when they went down to the Borderers by 7 goals to 1, but Club supporters will not take this defeat too seriously when considering that neither Howe nor Williams were playing in the forward line.

The Navy fielded a very weak side against the Police and were handicapped by an injury to Hott, their goalkeeper, which necessitated him leaving the field. Hott was taken to hospital, and is now progressing well. The Police fully deserved their win, but the shooting of their forwards was again deplorably weak.

Chinese Athletic overcame South China in the Second Division to maintain their 100 per cent. record, while Eastern made their debut with a nine to nil defeat.

The University, who surprised South China last week, failed dismally against the much improved Service Corps eleven and were routed by 4 goals to 1.

First Division.

JONES SCORED FOUR TIMES IN FOUR MINUTES.

Weak Club Side Sustain Heavy Defeat.

HOWE INJURED.

(By Sport Book)

Borderers 7 Club 1

It was a struggle of keen stubbornness against a finer art of clever passing and positioning, and the latter, which the Borderers adopted, led them through to overcome the Club easily by the score of 7 goals to 1.

Both teams made chances for this encounter at Soakunpo. The Borderers had Wallister in for Channings, whilst Manning Ralston led the Club attack in place of Howe, who is resting in view of the forthcoming International.

Rodger in the Club goal was only guilty of one fault, that of misjudging Jones' third goal. The Borderers' forwards were in their best shooting form, rounding off their splendid opening play by hard sure shots. Jones took advantage of the Club defence's shaking opening when he netted four goals in as many minutes, after the good combination of Pallister and Harris had enabled Davis to open the scoring.

HALF BACK WEAKNESS.

Gaps appeared in the Club's defence time and again as the half backs became out of position by the keen Borderers' attack. Both the tackling and the kicking of the Club defenders was weak, with the result that the Club forwards were seen to little advantage. E. Strange in the Club forward line was the only man to drop back and endeavour to get the ball for himself. He could not, however, get the forwards into anything like a goal-scoring mood.

Jones and Duncan made an admirable left wing for the Borderers, and it was from this quarter that the Club goal was repeatedly jeopardized before the interval, but Rodger was not again beaten.

Half time:

Borderers 6 Club 0

In spasms, the Club recovered after the breather, but they could not shake the Borderers' defence, although Mullane did well once or twice in covering the uncanny Morrison.

"SWISS" SIXTH.

Podmore at centre half for the Borderers had not much to trouble him in holding off Ralston, and was seen to much advantage in good constructive work.

Good artistry by Jones and Davis enabled them to worm their way through the Club's defence and the latter registered Borderers' sixth point.

Play then became scrappy, but with the Club striving to decrease the arrears, Hynes sent Duncan away, only for the latter to run the ball out of play.

From Skinner's free kick midway in his own half, Duncan fastened on and from the centre Ralston got his head to the ball and placed it out of Johnson's reach.

The Club maintained pressure, but the Borderers' rear-guard were fully on the alert. Morrison made up for his early shakiness by running through the Club's halves and sending up a well-placed pass for Pallister to net the Borderers seventh goal.

Art. Bdr. Brown lined out the following teams:

Borderers—Johnson; Mullane, Morrison, Wynn, Moore, Williams, Pallister, Harris, Davis, Jones and J. Duncan.

Club—Rodger; Martin & Strange; Hynes, Skinner & A. Duncan, G. Duncan, Hume, Ralston, E. Strange and Fowler.

VERY WEAK NAVY TEAM GO DOWN TO POLICE.

Loose Goalkeeper in Second Half After Collision.

SCRAPPY PLAY WITNESSED.

The Navy fielded a decidedly weak eleven against the rearranged Police eleven at Caroline Hill, and, although they were unfortunate in losing their goalkeeper Hott through injury, they were not at all unlucky in having to leave the field, four clear goals in arrears.

The Police had a new left wing on view in Williams and Cornwall, whilst their rear-guard was completely changed, C. Pile being between the posts.

The Police soon settled down, and with Channings proving a tremendous stumbling block to the Navy forwards, the Police were early on the aggressive, Johnston opening the scoring. The Navy tried retaliation, but without success. Johnston looked successful again within the next few minutes, but his parting shot was feeble.

T. Pile was next successful in netting, after cleverly eluding Harvey, he cut in and gave Hott no chance with a hard drive.

Half time:

Police 2 Navy 0

Play continued to be of a poor standard, with the Police holding their advantage, mainly through the fine constructive work of their halves, Channings being the most prominent of the trio.

Misfortune befell the Navy as the result of the Police third goal, after R. Pile had gone through and failed, Hott fumbled a clearance, and was tackled by Williams, who netted the ball. In colliding, however, Hott was badly injured and had to leave the field.

With Harvey donning the jersey, the Navy defence was further handicapped, and found the Police forwards too good for them.

A neat piece of football by Cornwall resulted in that player coming in to finish off his effort with a well-placed shot which gave Harvey no chance.

The Navy tried hard in the closing stages, but they found Bowman and Blackburn safe.

Result:

Police 4 Navy 0

Mr. J. W. Baldwin lined out the following teams:

Police—J. Pile, Blackburn, Bowman, Stevens, Channings, Brittain, Moss, T. Pile, Johnston, Williams and Cornwall.

Navy—Hott, Gilbert and Harvey; Robinson, Stephens and Burrows; Mack, Usher, Glass, Barnett and Cornack.

RECREIO LOSE AFTER SCORING FIRST.

Artillery Indebted to Moore For "Hat Trick."

GUNNERS' FIRST WIN.

The Artillery fielded a rearranged side with Allen dropping back into the defence, and Walker resuming his place in the forward line, and so registered their first win of the season by beating a weak Recreio eleven by 4 goals to 2.

The Recreio, kicking off with only nine men, showed any amount of dash in the opening exchange, and were soon a goal in the lead when Goncalves netted.

The Gunners at one retaliated, and for a time the Recreio defenders experienced an anxious period in keeping the keen opposing forwards at bay. The R. A. combined well at the commencement of their movements, but their shooting lacked accuracy, many of their shots clearing the bar.

After Seal had missed badly for the Artillery, the Recreio broke away and Gutierrez had had luck with a shot that hit the upright.

The Artillery again took up the attack and for a time penned the Recreio in their own goal area, but the Portuguese defenders working splendidly and held out. The Gunners were not to be denied, however, and Wood and Bryant scored in quick succession to place the Artillery in the lead.

Close on the interval, Moore placed the R. A. further ahead, getting his head to a pass across the goalmouth.

Half time:

R. A. 3 Recreio 1

The Gunners renewed their having pressure on the resumption, and Moore again scored.

The Artillery now showed better combination and understanding, but their midfield movements were neutralized by their wild kicking in front of goal.

Moore was again in the picture with a good goal, thus concluding a splendid piece of midfield work.

Much surprise was caused when the Recreio, who appeared to have cracked up badly, broke away and scored through Goncalves. This success was only momentary, however, for the Recreio were soon on the defensive again trying to stave off the keen Artillery attack.

They failed to hold Bryant, who showed splendid style in rounding off clever midfield play by giving Wood possession, for the latter to cut in and register the Artillery's sixth goal.

Result:

R. A. 6 Recreio 2

E. R. A. Anderson lined out the following teams:

Artillery—Comboy; Allan & Taylor; Goller, Pardoe & Rodgers; Wood, Bryant, Moore, Walker & Seal. Recreio—J. D. Minihane, P. M. Xavier, H. M. Britto, H. C. Remedios, R. Silva Netto, V. Marques, J. Goncalves, J. Gomes, G. A. Gutierrez, L. A. Rocha, F. A. Santos.

SAINTS SURPRISE KOWLOON BY TWO GOALS.

Leonard Leads Forwards In Brilliant Style.

GOSANO'S SCHEMING.

Before a small crowd on the Kowloon ground St. Joseph's surprised the home side, by emerging victors by two clear goals.

The Saints were much the better side, their forwards well led by Leonard, while the scheming Gosano gave the Kowloon defenders much trouble.

Watkins was still an absentee from the Kowloon side and McKelvie was brought back again to right back. While moving over to right half.

The opening play was very even, Gosano and Nelems both making good attempts. Blake was injured but soon returned and Nelems welcomed him back with a good dribbling effort, but offside spoiled the movement.

Gosano was quick to see that McKelvie was not in his best form, and put some perfect passes on the left to Sabhan, but Wolfe watched the winger very closely. From one of Gosano's long passes, however, Sabhan centred well, and Gurevitch netted to turn Gosano's shot round the post.

Play remained in the Kowloon goalmouth and from a corner Leonard scored after a good shot by Costa had been headed out by a defender. Kowloon made several good efforts but were met with a sterling defence. Lawrence and Gomes kicking well. The Saints went further ahead when Delgado centred from close in for Souza to place the ball wide of Gurevitch. Bliss was the usual hard worker but could not get the forwards going and the Saints crossed over with a two-goal lead.

McKelvie went centre half on the resumption, and the Kowloon side started off as though they meant business. Campbell on the wing, however, wasted good passes, and with the confident play of the Saints' halves, Marquis was not often troubled. The tall Costa at centre half, broke up numerous attacks and gave Nelems no rope. Hill made several good attempts, but found no opportunity to shoot.

Leonard made a sparkling run down the field and Gurevitch only saved his parting shot by conceding a corner. Campbell now improved and from one of his centres, Nelems just missed with a glorious header. Both sides attacked in turn but there was no further scoring and the "Saints" much improved side ran out worthy winners.

Mr. T. Stokes had charge of the following teams:

Kowloon—Gurevitch; McKelvie & Wells; White G., Whitfield & Bliss; Campbell, Hill, Nelems, Blake, Phillips & R.

St. Joseph's—Marques; E. Lawrence & I. Gomes; Victor, Y. Costa and Fernandez; Delgado, Gosano, D. Leonard, Souza and M. Sabhan.

Second Division.

GUNNERS STAGE AMAZING RECOVERY.

Frearson The Man of The Moment.

With a two goal lead at the interval, the Lincolns appeared to have both points in their possession, but Frearson, the former stalwart in the Gunners' defence who has just recovered from a severe illness, moved into the forward line after the interval to turn the Gunners' ragged forward line into an attack, with the result that a great change came over the game and the Artillery eventually ran out worthy winners by four goals to two.

The Artillery faced the wind in the opening half and were soon on the defensive, and it was not long before Lt. Hocquard ran in from the left to open the scoring for the Lincolns. The R.A. could not get far past the half way line owing to their unsuccessful attempts at combination. McGuinness netted the Lincoln's second goal with a splendid shot that curled into the side of the net.

In the second half Frearson, coming up from the defence, was soon in the picture and reduced the Lincoln's lead with a hard drive. This goal acted like a tonic to the R.A. men, who maintained their attack and drew level when Wood headed in.

From Discombe's shot, sent in from the wing shortly afterwards, Rowden diverted the ball into his own net to give the Artillery the lead.

The Lincolns fell away badly after this reverse and it was only the smart keeping of Deacon that kept Frearson from scoring more than one further goal.

Result:

Lincolns 2 R.A. 4

Lincolns—Deacon; Rowden, Hackett, Dudley, Murrell, Bates, Davis, Harper, Malpas, Mc. Guinness and Hocquard. R.A.—Holmes, Leadbeater, Frearson, Ward, Gough, Harrie, Wood, Hopkins, Birmingham, Brydon and Discombe.

MAINLAND SIDE WIN H. K. KOWLOON FEUD.

Club's Weak Team Clearly Outplayed.

The Club fielded a weak side at Kowloon and were soundly beaten by 5 goals to 2. Their forwards were very weak, and, in the first half particularly, their passes were very wild, thus giving the Kowloon halves an easy time.

Milne had to leave the field in the first few minutes and the Club struggled throughout the first half with only ten men. The Kowloon forwards were soon in action and after Fogwill had saved well from Bickford, Law headed through his own goal. Cook was very safe in the Kowloon goal and made a great save from Urquhart. Webb scored Kowloon's second goal after good play by Eastman, who showed some of his old form. Before the interval Bickford made his side's tally three by cleverly placing the ball over the advancing Fogwill's head.

Play was more even in the second half, Sharp reducing the lead from close in Duffield and Phillips, however, placed Kowloon further in the lead. Simmons scored the Club's second goal from a breakaway after drawing Cook out of his goal. Kowloon were by far the better team.

Kowloon—Cook; Palmer, Petherick, Tully, Bonwell, Greenberg, Eastman, Webb, Phillips, Duffield and Bickford. Club—Fogwill; Potouloff, Lowe, McKeller, Puncheon, Boyd, Urquhart, Milne, Simmons, Sharp and Farrow.

TSUNG TSIN HOLD NAVY IN FIRST HALF.

Jack Tars Score Three Times After Interval.

The Navy kicked off with the advantage of the slight breeze at the Valley, and soon transferred play into their opponents' half. Their forwards, however, had difficulty in controlling the light ball and the Tsung Tsin defenders mislicked time and again, but the several resultant corners all proved fruitless. The inside forwards of the Navy sent in several shots, but they found the Chinese goalkeeper on the spot. The forwards of the Chinese team were not very much in the

LONDON TOPICS

From Our Own Correspondent

September 26.

Sir Ronald Ross's Poetry
Sir Ronald Ross is remembered for his discovery of the malaria parasite.

Sir Ronald's life has not been devoted exclusively to science. His novel, "The Child of the Ocean," was based on his own experiences, for at the age of seven he made a five months' journey to England from India in a sailing clipper.

It was at Bangalore 40 years ago that he wrote a poem, "Indian Fevers," which has a peculiarly appropriate significance to-day, the 36th anniversary of his discovery.

One verse ran:
The painful fever ask, can we not cure
We answer, No, not yet; we seek the laws,
O God, reveal thro' all this thing obscure
The unseen, small, but million-murdering cause.

Sir Thomas Royden.
Sir Thomas Royden, Mr. Neville Chamberlain's host at Tillypronie, Aberdeenshire, is a brother of Dr. Maude Royden, the well-known woman preacher. He has managed more successfully than most men to combine immense business activity with a devotion to sport and travel.

Sir Thomas, whose disposition is rather shy and retiring, is best known to the public as a shipping magnate and a former member of Parliament. In his day Sir Thomas was a fearless rider to hounds, and had more than his share of bad falls. Today, at the age of sixty-one, he prefers shooting.

His parties at Lake Hall, Chester, for the Grand National are famous. The same guests come year after year. Some of them, like Sir George Clerk, now British Ambassador to Turkey, journey from the ends of the earth in order to be present.

Changes at the Bank.
Many people will be surprised to learn that the Bank of England proposes amending its by-laws to authorise the exclusive employment of any member of its Court at a salary. For there is a widespread impression that a Bank of England directorship is an extremely lucrative post.

In point of fact the 24 members of the Court receive no remuneration, and even the Governor's salary is a good deal less than that of many high officials in the Civil Service.

Until comparatively recent years the Governorship was not regarded as a full-time post. The time is remembered when the Governor regularly left the Bank for his own private place of business at four o'clock in the afternoon.

Martin Harvey, Author.
Sir John Martin Harvey is busy writing his autobiography. A couple of years or so ago a large and copiously illustrated volume appeared dealing with the art and the career of this fine actor; but it had a catalogue of touch about it, and lacked the human element, which he himself will, no doubt, now supply.

With the exception of Mr. Fred Terry, who is now in his seventieth year, and acts but rarely, Sir John is the doyen of the rapidly diminishing band of actor-managers. For Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson retired long ago. He is also one of the few remaining links with Irving.

It is difficult to believe from his appearance that he joined the Lyceum Company exactly fifty years ago, and was managing that historic theatre in 1889.

M. Herriot and—
From the amount of space which the French newspapers are devoting to M. Herriot's visit to the Channel Islands one would be entitled to imagine that it was a journey of the very highest diplomatic importance.

The departure from Paris of the Prime Minister and of M. Camille Chautemps, Sir Herbert Samuel's opposite number, was attended by every elaboration of courtesy, and a large official deputation saw them off. Their route to Havre was a triumphal march, culminating in banquets and receptions.

M. Herriot is to meet Sir Austen Chamberlain on his return to Cherbourg, and an attempt to attach political significance to this is also being made.

Mme. Herriot.
Where, meanwhile, is Mme. Herriot, most retiring of Prime Ministers' wives?

At the moment she is making one of her rare public appearances. She is among mountaineering enthusiasts at the Alpine Congress being held at Chamonix.

From her earliest youth Mme. Herriot has been an ardent mountaineer, and at one time the Prime Minister himself used to spend much time climbing with her.

Now, while her husband scales the no less perilous peaks of political life Mme. Herriot is acting as President of the Congress of Alpinists.

The Meringue Piccard.
Professor Piccard has become the hero of Zurich. In every conceivable place his photograph is offered.

Cigarettes have been named after him, pastrycooks have christened a new meringue with his name, pamphlets about his life and work are in the window of every bookshop.

The sight of this quiet, smiling, exalted, with his tall, thin figure, and bush of flowing hair, hurrying through the streets, with nervous gestures and a pre-occupied expression, has become familiar to every inhabitant of the town.

The townsmen have another reason for liking the professor. His presence has given a fillip to local business.

sometimes hinder the growth of peaceful and comfortable living of the people without pain and penury. The Hindu Religion, during the centuries of its existence, had gathered some moss around it and Buddha's main yearning was to preach a "Clean Philosophy" of life without hindrances of dogmas and rituals for the material well-being of the world.

Desire is Unhappiness.
The main cause of unhappiness is "Desire." This "Desire" has to be rooted out or controlled, and then happiness and contentment follow. This being his main object, and because his religion, viz., Hinduism had preached enough of God, the Buddha, instead of repeating all the old theories, preached Puritan old theories, preached another way to achieve "Nirvana" which others may very well call "reaching God." And after all, what is God but a "Theoretical Emblem" or "Symbol," or "Universal Soul," "some supposed invisible Centre," "some invisible Omnipotent and Omnipresent Power?" If men follow the eight principles of Life as preached by Buddha, can they not reach the "Final Absolution" which is "Nirvana?" Every Theorist admit that the "Final" of the Universe is "God." The "Final Absolution" may be interpreted as "Absolution as conferred by the Final." This was exactly what Buddha meant and he preached for it.

Religion Mutilated.

(5) The "Local Padre" make a grievance of "Idol Worship." He says Buddha's followers introduced it. But, is it not true, that followers of every Founder of Religion, usually interpret, misinterpret, propagate, mutilate, alter and change some of the original principles preached by the Founder? Can the "Local Padre" show us any Religion that has come down to us pure in form as preached by the Founder? The fact is that the "Local Padre" seems to have a cause for his grievance against Idol Worship and therefore, he has introduced this issue. Let me tell the "Local Padre" that the "Idol Worship" has rendered useful service to the World in the past and will continue to do so till eternity. The main idea underlying "Idol Worship" is the extreme devotion, the exuberance of mind, the genuine admiration shown by one person to another. The greatest centre for admiration and devotion is, by all common consent, God. When we men worship tiny Tin-Gods of this World, garland them, bow at their feet and show all the signs of subservience to these human Tin-Gods, does not God, the "Universal Soul," "God the Omnipotent," "God the Omnipresent," etc., deserve similar Worship? This worship may be mental, vocal or practical, or all the three. Therefore worship of God in any form is desirable and practised.

Invented Symbol.

Now, the question might arise as to why we should worship "Idols" as signifying "God." The answer is that "Idols" are essentially meant for the ignorant, whose intellectual capacity is not so well-developed as to comprehend God in the abstract. Such class of people exist in the world at any time. Any theoretical explanation to them about God and his various "Omni" qualities would not satisfy them. Therefore, the leaders of the original people, who were more advanced intellectually and who had to discharge the task of educating their less cultured and more ignorant brethren, invented a symbol on which the ignorant can concentrate their mind and attention. It is the same principle as teaching children on the Kindergarten system. Thus, once the mind of the ignorant people is concentrated on some object, they can develop their mental faculties in a manner to comprehend God in the abstract. They can then carry on mental meditation without a tangible object. And, after all, can any one pray to God, without some mental symbol? May I ask, when people carry on this mental worship, what do they think of? Is it to a vacuum that they pray? Is it impossible to mentally pray to God in the abstract, without some kind of mental creation of form. This is, therefore, the principle underlying "Idol Worship."

Besides, is not God Omnipresent? If He is Omnipresent, is He not found in all the objects that constitute this world, animate or inanimate? Therefore, He is present in the stone, in the earth, or in the wood. Idols are made of these, and some shapes are given to them to represent various qualities of God, or given various personifications of God as would appeal to the ignorant. If anything is done to educate the ignorant for belief in God, is it not desirable? Is it not better to signify God to the un-

Chevrolet is the lowest priced

The Synchro-Mesh transmission is a refinement of the high price field. It was originally used by Cadillac, because Cadillac owners demanded the best and could afford to pay for such devices to make driv-

Owners of low priced cars have expected to sacrifice some such "luxury" features for a price advantage. Now, Chevrolet, with its enormous power of

the Synchro-Mesh transmission
and bring to Chevrolet owners
one more feature of fine car

Mr. Hoover's
Fear For Gold
Exaggerated

"At no period during the deliberations last Spring and Summer did any administration spokesman privately or publicly express the lightest concern for the gold standard," Senator Glass said.
On the other hand he recalled frequent public assurances from treasury officials that the position of the American dollar was unassailable.

Confidence Fell.

From Paris, who has apparently not yet recovered from his attack of water on the knee, was forced to drop out at the beginning of the sixth lap in the 220 yards Championship. H. Lange, swam a splendid race to win by about 2 1/2 yards from Campbell, who had put on a furious burst of speed, but who was just unable to overtake him. E.
Raiton finished third; yards behind
Campbell; but he looked sufficiently fresh to continue another 220.

At the final swimming gala held at the Y.M.C.A. last night,
A. Easterbrook, by winning the 50 yards handicap, totalled the most points to win the Aggregate Cup, donated by Mr. Justice Wood.

Fast races, a tug of war, a novel ty race and a thrilling water polo game completed the evening's swimming events. Dancing, with music provided by Mickey's Melody Makers, was held in the West Lounge to complete the gala attractions.

Mr. E. F. Selk, sports secretary, in introducing Miss Anne Fowler, who presented the prizes, said,
"This gala marks the finish of the swimming season at the Y.M.C.A.
It has been very successful one and we are grateful for the support of the contestants, officials and spectators."

CLOSE FINISH.

In the 50 yards handicap, the scratch man, W. Stoker, relinquished his lead about half way when the others pulled up on him.
Easterbrook (8) passed them all about ten yards from the finish to win by a touch.

SCHROEDER WINS BREAST
STROKE TITLE.

Donn Drops Out Of 220.

In the 100 Yards Breast Stroke, G. Fowler and W. Schroeder, the only two contestants, took the water with beautiful dives. Fowler went into the lead at the beginning, and held it until the fourth lap.
Schroeder, however, managed to gain on each lap despite the splendid turns made by Fowler. Fifteen yards from the finish, Fowler, who had grown tired at the fast pace, was passed, and Schroeder shot ahead to win by three yards.

DONN DROPS OUT.

A. Donn, who has apparently not yet recovered from his attack of
water on the knee, was forced to drop out at the beginning of the sixth lap in the 220 yards Championship. H. Lange, swam a splendid race to win by about 2 1/2 yards
from Campbell, who had put on a furious burst of speed, but who was just unable to overtake him. E.
Raiton finished third; yards behind
Campbell; but he looked sufficiently fresh to continue another 220.

In the Mixed Relay race, there were 12 entries, eight men and four ladies. E. W. Raiton, Miss Hunter, J. Jenner, Miss Fowler, A. Easter-brook and B. Rasmussen, (Capt.)
represented one team, while C. L.
Aris, Miss Shoemith, W. T. Campbell, Mrs. Schroeder, H. Lange and E. F. Selk (Capt.) represented the other.

Rasmussen's team took the lead at first, but quickly lost it when Miss Shoemith passed Miss Hunter.
Selk's team held the lead until the finish. Selk and Rasmussen, both anchor men, swam a splendid race but the former's lead was too much for Rasmussen who, however, put up a wonderful fight to win. He lost by only a yard.

KEEN POLO GAME.

The novelty race, which necessitated the swimming of fifty yards, and drinking a bottle of water and then swimming the final 50 yards, proved a source of amusement to the spectators.

Polo teams consisting of F. Webb,
J. Henry, J. Jenner, E. F. Selk,
W. F. Kerr, G. Fowler and W.
Schroeder (Capt.) for the "Blues", and H. A. Angus, W. Stoker, E.
Murphy, H. Lange, B. Rasmussen,
W. T. Campbell and E. W. Raiton (Capt.) for the Whites, provided a good game. One spectacular back hand shot by Raiton was the highlight of the game. Schroeder scored all four goals for the "Blues", who won by 4 goals to 2.

W. F. Kerr, V. Critchley, E. F.
Selk and B. Rasmussen defeated a team composed of W. Stoker, A. W.
Torrible, A. Jenkins, A. Easter-brook and M. Critchley by two pulls to nil to win the Tug of War contest.

STUDENTS PRODUCE SHERIDAN PLAY.

Katherine Lai Shines As
"Mrs. Malaprop."

Members of the Hong Kong University Arts Association surpassed themselves last night when they produced R. B. Sheridan's comedy,
"The Rivals," before an appreciative audience in the Great Hall of the University.

It is certainly one of the best things they have done and the cast has been admirably chosen. It would be invidious to single out any particular player, unless it be Katherine Lai, who in the role of Mrs.
Malaprop, is remarkably good.

The finest bit of the play was Act III, Scene I, when three of the principal characters were on the stage exchanging sparkling, witty dialogue. Between the acts, musical selections, arranged by Mr. F.
Mason, L. T. C. L., A. R. C. O., were rendered, the artists being Mr. F.
Mason, Mrs. Griggs, Mrs. Arnold,
Mr. H. Leung and Mr. E. Schrotter.
